LIGHTNING ON LINKS KILLS T. B. JOHNSON

New York Man, New Navy Solicitor, Struck Down on Chevy Chase Club Course.

BODY IS FEARFULLY BURNED

Companion and Caddy Knocked Down —Dead Man Once Leader of Board of Aldermen and Active Politician.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—With not a drop of rain falling, a flare of lightning, attracted probably by the heel of the golf club which he held over his shoulder, struck and instantly killed Tristam Burgess Johnson of New York, recently appointed Solicitor of the Navy Department, on the golf grounds of the Chevy Chase Country Club early this afternoon. Persons prominent in official life lunching at the club, not far away, were stunned by the shock, while Mr. Johnson's host, Francis B. Poe of this city, with whom he was playing, and his caddy were both thrown to tne ground. The caddy, on picking himself up, fell three times before he could recover his balance.

Mr. Johnson's body was burned almost beyond recognition, and Surgeon General Stokes of the navy, who happened to be at the club, pronounced death to have been instanaeous. Before the bolt fell there had been a few claps of htunder, and while a storm was evidently brewing, the players hoped to finish their game before the rain came. They were on the tenth hole, 100 yards away from any tree, when Mr. Johnson sliced his ball off to one side. With his club over his shoulder he walked after the ball.

He had gone only a dozen yards from where Mr. Poe and the caddy were standing, when there was a crashing peal of thunder, a flashing glare, and Mr. Johnson fell. The lightning burned a clean hole in his shoulder where his club rested. His hair was burned off and his coat ripped. His trousers were literally burned off him, while his legs were terribly charred when his friends reached him. The flash seems to have traversed the full length of his body, passing into the earth through his feet. The soles of his shoes were burned through and his shocs were torn to tatters. The lightning set fire to the grass and a circle of a dozen yards was burned before the rain, which then began to fall, extinguished it.

The body was at once carried to the clubhouse, where Surgeon General Stokes made a quick examination. A single glance was enough to show that life was extinct, and arrangements were at once made for bringing the body into town. The Maryland authorities—the clubhouse is just outside the District of Columbia—expressed no desire for post-mortem examination, and the body was at once put in an automobile and taken to the home of Mr. Poe, whom Mr. Johnson was visiting in the absence of his family.

The death of the Solicitor caused a tremendous shock in Washington when the news reached here. Already the loud clap of thunder had attracted attention in the city—seven miles from the scene of the tragedy—but when it was learned that a death had occurred on President Taft's favorite golfing course horror was universally expressed. The Chevy Chase Club is one of the best-known country clubs in the United States and is a favorite lounging place for members of the Cabinet, Senators, diplomats and visiting notables. Nearly every afternoon when the President is here he plays a course over the links in company with some member of his official family or a high officer of the army or navy.

Mr. Johnson was 30 years of age and a native of New York. He had served on the Board of Aldermen in New York City and was Republican leader of that body. Recently, however, he had been practicing law. He was an ardent political worker in the same district in which Representative Parsons won his spurs.

His father is J. Augustus Johnson of South Orange, N. J., who with his mother and sister now are in New Hampshire on a motoring trip and are expected back at their Summer home at Buck Hills Falls, Penn., in a few days.

A graduate of Columbia and of Williams College, Mr. Johnson was married about four years ago to Miss Elizabeth Giddings, daughter of Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University. His wife and two children are now at Atlantic City. Mrs. Johnson was advised of her husband's death last night by Bascom Johnson, a cousin of the dead man, who lives at Cherrydale, Va. Dr. Taber Johnson of this city is an uncle of the deceased, while Dr. Lorin Johnson, also of Washington, is a cousin. Mrs. Johnson will arrive in Washington early to-morrow morning and arrange for the funeral of her husband.

FLEES THIEVES, KILLS MAN.

Italian, Beset by Them, Also Shoots Woman—He and Brother Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 16.—A planned robbery of two brothers resulted in the death of an innocent man and the shooting of a woman this afternoon. The brothers were Antonio and Liuga Oleava of Voorheesville, who were in a room over the saloon at 51 Dallius Street with a number of other Italians. From what the police can learn, the brothers were drawn into an argument with Angelina Spena, 35 years old. By a preconcerted plan both brothers were attacked at once, each being hit from behind with a club, whereupon Antonio drew two revolvers and fired, one of the bullets hitting the Spena woman in the neck.

Then he dashed downstairs. Liuga, flourishing a long knife, followed him. They ran toward Madison Avenue, Antonio continuing to discharge his revolvers. A crowd was quickly followed. A man in the path of the two men became confused in his endeavor to get out of the way. Antonio, believing that the man intended to intercept him, fired at him, the bullet entering his breast. He died in a few minutes.

The brothers continued their flight, Antonio reloading his revolvers as they ran, but Policeman Jacob Sayers, who was off duty, obtained a rig and caught up with the fleeing men, whom he placed under arrest.

The dead man is believed to be a stranger in Albany. He was apparently 40 years old, is five feet tall, and has a brown mustache.

The Oleava brothers had $40 in their possession and a receipt for $500 from a private banker paid to him for transmission to Italy.

A number of arrests have been made by the police, including Angelo Lataffa, proprietor of the place where the brothers were attacked.

It is believed that several men have been hit by the Italian's promiscuous bullets and are in hiding.

The police discovered Louis Lucilinio in a house next to the saloon and took him to the hospital, where it was ascertained that a bullet had passed through his lungs. Physicians say he will die. It is thought he was one of the gang that attacked the Oleava brothers.

SUBWAY CONFERENCE FUTILE.

No Decision at Night Session on Interborough Guarantee.

Another conference was held last night at the house of Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission by the city's subway conferees and representatives of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The session lasted from 8:30 until nearly 1 o'clock, and broke up without any decision as to the basis of an agreement between the Interborough and the city for the extension of the Interborough Subway lines.

There were present, besides Chairman Willcox, Public Service Commissioners McCarroll, Maltbie, and Eustis, Borough Presidents McAneny, Cromwell, and Miller, President Shonts and Andrew Freedman, a Director of the Interborough; E. F. J. Gaynor, Auditor for the Interborough; Edward M. Grout, special counsel for the Interborough, and ex-Mayor Seth Low.

The Interborough representatives left the conference about half an hour before the others came out. On leaving President Shonts said that the Interborough had not materially modified its position as outlined last week, which was that in order to take the new lines it would require a guarantee from the city of 9 per cent. on approximately $125,000,000.

When the city's representatives came out they said that no statement could be made until the conference reported to the Board of Estimate at an executive session this morning. No one would predict whether or not the board would be able to take final action on the matter to-day. The indications, however, were that the city conferees and the Interborough were as far apart as ever and that unless the city yielded substantially all that the Interborough has demanded in the way of a guarantee the negotiations would eventually be broken off by the withdrawal of that company.

POSTAL BANKS HERE AUG. 1.

Polyglot Circulars Ready for Foreign Born—Other Cities Named.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Over a thousand postal savings banks have been established in second-class offices, and Postmaster General Hitchcock is now ready to designate some of the larger first-class offices in the country.

In furtherance of this plan he issued orders to-day for the receipt of postal deposits from and after Aug. 1 at the main post offices in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Boston, selecting these four cities because in each one there is located a Sub-Treasury of the United States, which will greatly facilitate the heavy banking transactions that are likely to result from the postal savings business.

It is expected that the system will prove to be particularly popular with tho vast number of foreign-born Americans in these cities who have been in the habit of sending their surplus savings to their home countries. In New York City alone last year the money orders sent abroad amounted to about $9,000,000 and a considerable part of this sum represented the savings of foreign-born residents.

The foreign-born population of Greater New York amounts to over 1,500,000, and it is from these foreign-born Americans that the demand for postal savings has been most persistent.

Similar conditions exist in Chicago, St. Louis and Boston. In Chicago the foreign-born population amounts to 700,000; in St. Louis to 150,000, and in Boston to 200,000. The value of the money orders sent abroad from these cities last year was from Chicago, $5,500,000; St. Louis, $1,000,000, and from Boston, $2,300,000.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has had pamphlets of information printed in several languages for the convenience of immigrant patrons of the postal savings banks who have not yet learned to read English.

SCARE ON PICNIC BOAT.

Dooling's Guests Persist in Crowding to One Side and Captain Puts Ashore.

When the steamboat Orient left the foot of East Fortieth Street at 11 o'clock yesterday morning she had on board more than 1,100 persons, guests, and members of the Peter J. Dooling Association, all bound for College Point for the annual picnic and games. For the most part the big, happy party was made up of Tammany men and their families from the Ninth Assembly District.

With a strange persistence and despite the order of the Captain the crowd seemed possessed to cluster on the larboard side, and they did so in such numbers that the Orient listed in a terrifying manner. The sight of water coming in only added to the confusion, and soon the boat was the scene of something remarkably like a panic.

The growing terror made it impossible to spread the people evenly over the boat, so the Captain kept near the eastern shore of the river in case of trouble. At a Long Island City pier, opposite Thirty-fourth Street, he put ashore, and more than 100 persons seized the chance to leave the boat. Others had the same idea, but the Orient was off again before they could put it into execution.

The bulk of the party reached College Point in safety, but the deserters never appeared. When it came time to go home again a large proportion of the holiday-makers selected the most remote and roundabout conveyances rather than return on the Orient.

BOMBS EXCITE PASADENA.

Placed Near Home of Dr. Davis—One Explodes and Alarms Family.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 16.—One of two infernal machines placed in baskets in front of the residence of Dr. C. A. Davis, a retired manufacturer from the East, living at 328 Bellevue Drive, in the fashionable residence section of Pasadena, exploded shortly after 10 o'clock last night.

Some of the black powder in the smaller of the two machines prematurely exploded, but the gasoline, which was in an olive oil can next the powder, failed to ignite. The house shook with the report, and two of the doctor's daughters and H. C. Hallwood and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Zimmerman, who were being entertained in the dining room, rushed to the front of the house and discovered the front walk burnt and blackened, and the two bombs.

The police were unable to discover any clues. Dr. Davis is said to be without enemies, and no motive is known. Dr. Davis, who is a retired manufacturer of dental instruments, left Pasadent for the East in company with Mrs. Davis and another daughter two weeks ago.

The machines were evidently made by amateurs at bomb making. In the one which partially exploded was an olive oil can containing gasoline, wrapped in fuses, and a six-inch bicycle tubing filled with black powder entwined around it.

A telegram was sent to Dr. Davis, but no answer had been received late this afternoon. A theory that the explosion might have been caused by practical jokers was apparently upset by the dangerous nature of the bombs.

The intention was evidently to destroy the building by fire rather than by the explosion. Otherwise nitro-glycerine, or some high power explosive, would have been used in the cans and jars, instead of gasoline.

FIVE LIVES ARE LOST IN NEARBY WATERS

Arctic Social Club Sees One of Its Members Drown in the Hudson River.

BOY DIES IN AN OLD QUARRY

East River, Long Island Sound, and Jamaica Bay Each Claim One Victim—Many Are Rescued.

Five persons were drowned yesterday in waters near this city, and many others had narrow escapes. One of the drownings was in the Hudson River, one in the East River, one in the Sound opposite Zerega Point, Bronx; one in Jamaica Bay and one in an abandoned stone quarry in Nutley, N. J. Two men in a boat, assisted by several bathers, rescued two whole families when a row boat in which nine persons were crowded upset in Flushing Bay.

About fifty members of the Arctic Social Club, in camp in the Inter-State Palisade Park, New Jersey, witnessed the drowning of one of their number, Samuel Huberman, 23 years old, a clerk of 63 Baret Street, Brooklyn, in the Hudson River. Huberman, with Otto Mackowitz, another member of the club, of 2 Hart Street, Brooklyn, and a woman companion went out for a row about 4 P. M. Both men were in bathing suits. When their boat was about 500 feet from the Jersey shore Huberman dived overboard, and, climbing back into it again, repeated the performance several times. He failed to rise to the surface after one trial, and the crowd on the shore heard those in the boat call for help. For ten minutes the boat was rowed in a circle, but Huberman did not reappear.

Mackowitz, who could not swim, was restrained by the woman from jumping overboard after his friend. Their cries attracted Capt. Richard Cox who runs a ferry from the foot of Dyckman Street to the Jersey shore. With his helper, Michael Pizer, he came in a launch and graphed for Huberman, but not until 7 o'clock was the body recovered. When brought to the Dyckman Street landing, Dr. Jacobs of the Washington Heights Hospital was called, but he could do nothing.

When the body was taken to the West 152d Street police station a crowd had gathered, and in it was Mrs. Johanna Joyce of 514 West 152d Street. When she saw the body she cried out:

"That's my boy, my boy; he's dead!"

Then she fell to the sidewalk unconscious. After being revived she said that her son had gone to Coney Island in the morning, and as he had not returned she feared he was drowned. The police assured her that the body was not that of her boy.

Drowns in Abandoned Quarry.

An abandoned stone quarry in the Avondale section of Nutley, N. J., about five miles from Newark, was the scene of a drowning yesterday morning. The quarry has been the scene of many drownings, and the police had forbidden swimming there, but the water is clear and cool and a temptation to the youth of the neighborhood.

Yesterday morning the police were notified that four boys were swimming in the forbidden pool. Sergt. John Jamison went to the quarry and found three boys on a ledge all crying and prodding sticks into the deep water. They told him their companion, Joseph Kollar, 17 years old, of 408 South Eighth Street, Newark, while walking along the edge, had slipped into the centre and drowned. Joseph Richards of 506 South Twelfth Street, one of the boys, tried to save him but had almost been drowned himself. It was said that the water where young Kollar went down is eighty feet deep. The body was recovered.

John Probst, known also as "Jack" Olsen, a wrestler, and a member of the New York A. C., who lived at 198 Eldert Avenue, Brooklyn, and his uncle, Frank Sussman of 553 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, were bathing in Jamaica Bay from the foot of Greene Avenue, Rockaway Beach. They had swam out twice and had gotten well out from the shore for the third time, when both began screaming. They seemed to be drawn close together so that in their struggles each tended to drag the other down.

Probst, the first to disappear, went down in a suction hole, caused by the meeting of opposing currents. His uncle disappeared a moment after, and then reappeared on the surface. He was almost exhausted when Walter Donovan and Luther Loder, of 4 North Grove Avenue, Rockaway Beach, succeeded in dragging him to a wading depth. Donovan and Loder then swam back to the spot where Probst had disappeared, but were unable to find him, and his body was not recovered.

Drown Swimming from Launch.

Henry Smith, a driver of Throgs Neck, Bronx, was drowned yesterday morning in the Sound, opposite Zerega's Point. He had started from Westchester Creek on a day's outing in a launch, and he and his companions, John Kelly of 121 Parker Avenue, and Frank Raff, an employe of the Park Department, took turns in diving from the bow of the launch. Smith failed to reappear, and his companions' cries for help attracted Capt. Schleigh of the life-saving station near by. Although they grappled for several hours, Smith's body was not recovered.

William Ulip, 22, of 121 Beebe Avenue, Long Island City, while bathing in the East River at the foot of Noble Street, was seized with cramps and carried away by the swift tide before his companions could rescue him. His body was not recovered.

Two entire families, nine persons in all, thrown into Flushing Bay near North Beach, when their overloaded rowboat was upset, were all rescued. Six of them were taken to St. John's Hospital suffering from submersion. Those in the boat were Samuel Goldstein, a tailor of 10 Leonard Street, Brooklyn; his wife and three children; Abraham Weinbross of 68 Scholes Street, Brooklyn, his wife and two daughters. The boat was well down in the water, and when it was 150 feet from the shore one of the children became restless and upset it.

Benjamin Charles of 283 George Street, Brooklyn, and Walter Tiedinger of 289 George Street were near by in a boat, and several others were swimming when the boat upset. The bathers and the men in the boat succeeded in placing all the children on top of the overturned boat, and the women were told to cling to its sides. The boat then was drawn to the shore.

Joseph Campbell, age 16, of 3 Woodhull Street, Brooklyn, had a narrow escape from drowning off Pier 1, at the foot of Columbia Street, Brooklyn. When 200 feet from the pied he was seized with cramps and called for help. Those on the pier, who knew him to be a good swimmer, did not take him seriously for a time, but finally Ed. Bartley of 471 Fifty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, jumped from the pier and swam to his side. He reached Campbell just as he was going down and towed him back to the pier, where both were pulled out. Campbell was rushed to the Long Island College Hospital, where it was said he would recover.

Nicholas Fazanni, 14, of 150 Walworth Street, Brooklyn, with two companions, went out in a rowboat from Bergen Beach early and a short distance from shore dived from the boat. When Fazanni failed to reappear after a deep dive a companion dived after him and found him unconscious on the bottom. He succeeded in pulling Fazanni to the surface and into the boat. Fazanni had struck his head on a submerged log and remained unconscious for about an hour. He was hurried to the Kings County Hospital.

GIRL ODDLY SAVED IN DROP FROM FIRE

Bounces from Third to Second Floor Window Ledge and Into Open Window.

HAD RESCUED FOUR OTHERS

Went Back to Her Room to Take Out New Suit and Was Trapped—Badly Burned, but Will Live.

Driven to the window ledge of the third floor of the tenement house at 250 West Sixty-seventh Street by a fire in her home late last night, May Murphy, 21 years old, hung suspended over the street for a minute in view of several hundred horrified persons and then dropped. Her body struck a ledge on the second floor and bounded through a window into a room on that floor, and she was token out unconscious and badly burned, but alive.

The young woman lives on the third floor with her mother, her sisters, Catherine, 16 years; Terresa, 12 years, and her brother William, 14 years old. Her father is dead.

The family had been to an excursion and returned home last night about 9 o'clock. They were tired out and retired at once. About an hour later May, who occupies a room in the rear, was awakened by smoke and heat. She jumped out of bed and saw that the mattress on her bed in some manner had caught fire. She rushed to the front room and aroused her two sisters and mother. The apartment was filled with smoke and the four hurried out to the hall. Then May remembered her brother sleeping in a rear room, and dashing through the blazing room she occupied, she picked the boy up and carried him out into the hall, where he was taken down by her mother. Then the young woman remembered her new white flannel suit, of which she was very proud. She made up her mind to save it, and once more went back into the burning room.

When she got there she saw her suit in flames. In trying to rescue it her hair caught fire and she started out again. A back draught caught the fire and drove her to the front of the building on West Sixty-seventh Street and West End Avenue.

The smoke was dense and the fire was gaining on the front apartment. The young woman stood framed in the window shouting for help. She climbed out on the ledge and made as if to jump, but persons in the street below told her to wait.

The smoke and heat, however, became unbearable, and the young woman let herself over the ledge and hung suspended in midair until her strength gave out, and she dropped.

While some persons in the crowd turned away, expecting to hear the young woman's body hit the pavement, those who watched were amazed to see her bounce from the lower floor ledge through the open window and into the room.

Patrolman Lynch of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station dashed up the steps and into the room and carried the young woman to the street. She was taken to a near-by drug store and treated, and then was cared for by friends. She will recover. The fire was soon extinguished.

Twenty families living in the tenement were routed out and reserves were called to keep the crowds in order.

CAPTOR AND FUGITIVE DIE.

Pistol Duel Between Policeman and Escaped Convict Thus Ends.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 16.—In a desperate encounter with a police officer Jerry McCarthy, a fugitive who escaped from the penitentiary at Stillwater last March, was shot four times and killed in resisting arrest, while his would-be captor, Patrolman Ollinger, received four bullets, which caused his death twenty minutes later in a hospital.

The duel took place as the men lay on the sidewalk, grappling in the dark at the rear of a store, the door of which had been tried by McCarthy just as the shop was being closed.

Ollinger was found on top of McCarthy by neighbors who were attracted by their struggle. Both men weighed more than 200 pounds.

Police Chief Mealey says Ollinger reported to him on Friday that McCarthy had approached him with a proposal to join him in the burglary of the Central State Bank, Ollinger's aid to consist in avoiding that part of his beat to enable the bank safe to be robbed. Chief Mealey intimates that Ollinger's statement involves the names of several Minneapolis men, some of supposedly sound business standing, whom McCarthy said were in league with him.

WARNS PIER GAMBLERS.

Sheriff Wilcox, on Governor's Orders, Notifies Them to Close.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 16.—Gambling places in Narragansett Pier are not closed, in spite of the fact that yesterday afternoon Sheriff John R. Wilcox of Washington County, acting on orders received from the Governor, told them to close and go out of business. Yesterday strangers were not allowed in the gambling houses, and were closely watched by the street guards.

Men were seen going into the building where gambling is alleged to have gone on for years. Strangers who tried to get into these buildings were told that there was "nothing doing," but shortly afterward some regular patron would be seen gaining easy entrance.

After his round of calls at the pier resorts of a questionable nature, Sheriff Wilcox said he had not seen any gambling in progress, but he had suspicions that there was a game in one place. He spent a large part of the day there, and said that if any of the places were opened again other measures would be taken.

KISSES 286 BABIES.

Overseer Voliva Consecrates Them—Gets $27,500 from Followers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 16.—After kissing 286 babies ranging in age from 6 months to 4 years and consecrating them to the "cause of Zion," Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to John Alexander Dowie, stood by a barrel in Shiloh Tabernacle to-day and watched his disciples toss $27,500 into it as a "sacrifice offering."

Voliva kissed the infants and consecrated them in exactly forty-eight minutes.

FOUGHT A BURGLAR UPSTAIRS AND DOWN

Mr. McMullen Wrestles with Him from Floor to Floor in Mrs. Rycroft's Home.

WEST END AVENUE ALARMED

Women Servants Shriek from the Rycroft Windows and Policeman Shoots at Fugitive—Caught at Last.

The barking of two pet St. Charles spaniels aroused Mrs. Charles Rycroft yesterday morning shortly after 4 o'clock, and, donning a dressing gown, she descended from her bedroom on the fourth floor of her home, at 245 West End Avenue, and walked through several of the rooms. Mrs. Rycroft was in dread that a burglar had entered the house, which, owing to the custom of herself and her daughter, Alice, of spending most of the week-ends in the country, had been partly closed for the Summer, and looks as though the occupants were away.

She found no one, and after about an hour spent at a front window, returned to bed. Her daughter had not been awakened, nor had J. R. McMullen, a friend of the late Mr. Rycroft and a resident of Glens Falls, N. Y., who is visiting Mrs. Rycroft and her daughter, and who occupies several rooms on the third floor.

It could have been only a few moments after Mrs. Rycroft returned to her rooms, however, when Mr. McMullen awoke with the feeling that some one was in a library adjoining his bedroom. He lay still in bed, but peering through the door into the library, saw a man there. The intruder was stepping softly toward the bedroom. Mr. McMullen feigned sleep until he felt that the fellow was close beside his bed. Then he sprang up and grabbed him.

Instantly the man struck out with both fists. Mr. McMullen is more than six feet tall and heavily built, however. He returned blow for blow and presently got his arms around the burglar. The two men fought all over the bedroom, toppling to the floor and rolling about there until the burglar managed to break away. He leaped to his feet and dashed into the dressing room adjoining the bedroom on the side opposite the library.

The noise of the conflict had aroused Mrs. Rycroft and her daughter, as well as the butler and several women servants. All were on the fourth or fifth floor of the house, and presently several of the women were at front windows, screaming for the police.

Mr. McMullen, a floor below, meantime had grappled again with the burglar, whom he followed into the dressing room, a room which was practically a blind alley for the burglar, since it opened only into the bedroom whence he had run.

The fight was resumed with as much vigor as though both men had been fresh. Once Mr. McMullen got the burglar down, but the man wriggled out of his grasp and once more broke away, leaping through the bedroom into the library. Mr. McMullen was only a step behind and he tripped the burglar as he was about to run from the library to the stairs.

The men fought desperately and gradually worked their way into the hall. Over the bannisters leaned Mrs. Rycroft and her daughter, watching Mr. McMullen's struggle as though in a daze. The man and the burglar rolled and tumbled about the landing until they were at the very head of the stairs and then, suddenly, they toppled down the long flight, gripping each other tightly.

On the landing on the second floor they fought again until the burglar, shod in heavy shoes, kicked himself free from Mr. McMullen, clad only in pajamas. He dashed down the last flight of stairs, and out the front door. Mr. McMullen again was only a step behind, however, and he followed the burglar to the steps. In the distance was Policeman Kilgallen of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, already coming toward the house on the run in response to the calls of the women. To him Mr. McMullen pointed out the fugitive, who was making for Seventy-first Street, shouting that he was the burglar.

Kilgallen drew his revolver, yelling to the man ahead that he would fire if he didn't stop. The fugitive gave no heed to the threat, however, but bent all his energies on turning the corner into Seventy-first Street before the policeman could fire.

As he seemed about to achieve his object the policeman fired and a bullet whizzed past the fugitive's head. The report of the revolver and the screams of the women, coupled with Mr. McMullen's yells, had aroused the whole neighborhood by that time. From every window peered heads, their owners striving to catch a glimpse of the chase.

Into Seventy-first Street ran the burglar, but by this time Kilgallen, gun in hand, was close on his heels, and ere the man reached Broadway the policeman had collared him. He took him to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, where the prisoner said he was William Wiech of 140 West 122d Street. In his pocket the police found a chisel and several pawn tickets. He had little else and evidently had had no time to take anything from the Rycroft home. He was locked up.

Later Mrs. Rycroft and Mr. McMullen made an investigation in the Rycroft home. They found that the burglar had admitted himself by jimmying the lock on the basement door, and they concluded that he must have spent the whole night in the house. There was evidence that he had made a bed of some sacking in the cellar.

"It appears," said Mr. McMullen last night, "as though the fellow had entered here some time on Saturday night, perhaps after we had all retired, and had spent the night in the cellar waiting for the early morning hours, when we might be expected to be sleeping most soundly, to undertake his search of the house."

Mrs. Rycroft has no doubt now that the man was prevented from starting on his rounds of the rooms earlier by the barking of her pet dogs. Last night she was congratulating herself that she had not encountered the man on her trip of inspection around the third floor.

In the station Wiech confessed that he entered the house through the basement.

"There I found a mattress," he said. "I thought there was no one in the house and lay down on the mattress and fell asleep. I don't know how long I slept, but when I woke up it was dark and I didn't hear a sound. It must have been about midnight. I went through the basement until I came to the stairway leading to the first floor. I went upstairs, and after wandering around the first floor awhile went to the second floor. I encountered no one and began to ascend ot the next floor.

"As I reached the top of the stairway I stumbled against an upper step and fell into the hallway. I heard dogs barking and ran back downstairs to the basement. I waited for several hours and then I lay down on the mattress and went back to sleep. When I awoke it was daylight and I went upstairs. I got to the third floor and there found a door open. I found myself in a dressing room. While I was looking about the room I heard some one say: 'What are you doing here?' and when I turned I saw a man standing in the doorway of the room."

The young man was later arraigned in the West Side Court before Magistrate Corrigan and held without bail for trial.

Mrs. Rycroft said that in her own apartment was jewelry valued at $7,000, and downstairs silverware and other articles worth much more.

I am privately informed to-day that several deaths have lately occurred in Tuscany, especially near Fiena.

LOST HIS MIND IN THE HEAT.

Ithaca Man Wandered Away for a Week and Remembers Nothing.

ITHACA, N. Y., July 16.—Charles Seabring, who mysteriously disappeared from home a week ago, has been located at Kiowa, Kan. He went away from home during the hot spell, and he wired home that his mind has been a blank since he left. His wife and aunt left here to-day to bring him back.

HELEN GOULD GIVES A LAKE.

Presents Roxbury with a Reservoir Covering Ten Acres.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 16.—A reservoir is the latest gift to Roxbury, made by Miss Helen Gould, who has her home at that place.

It is the Dales Lake, which Miss Gould bought early in the Spring.

The lake covers ten acres, is supplied with springs, and contains thousands of trout. It will be connected with the Roxbury water system, furnishing excellent fire protection and an unfailing water supply.

TORE DOWN ITALIAN FLAG.

Sailor Angry Because It Was Flying Above the Stars and Stripes.

A sailor of the United States Navy was attracted yesterday by an Italian flag flying from the roof of a new brick dwelling house at 548 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, while the American flag was hanging out of the second-story window. He climbed up through the house, tore down the Italian flag, and threw it into the cellar, leaving the Stars and Stripes flying. A crowd cheered him.

The building is owned by Ambrose Artaserse of 526 Ocean Avenue, and the builder is Leopold Aurieman. When Artaserse heard what had happened he communicated with the police, and also made complaint to to the Italian Vice Consul, Alfredo Magninni, at Newark.

When the police reached the house a crowd was still there, but the sailor had gone.

MISS WARREN'S LONG SWIM.

Society Girl Betters Her Record Over Three and a Half Mile Stretch.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 16.—Miss Constance Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Warren of Newport and New York, swam from Bailey's Beach to the Forty Steps, off the Cliffs, a distance of three and a half miles, this afternoon. Miss Warren's time was one hour and fifty-five minutes, or fifteen minutes better than her own record of last season over the same course and under practically the same conditions. Boyer, the swimming instructor, kept a lifeboat close to the swimmer, who twice on the way took a little egg nog only. The wind was light, and except off the Point the sea was quite calm.

As Miss Warren was swimming close to the cliffs many people watched and applauded the swimmer, who after covering the distance jumped into the lifeboat and was rowed back to Bailey's Beach.

WOMEN'S FEET BIGGER NOW.

Nos. 2 and 3 About Gone and the Average Size is 4 to 5.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., July 16.—Women's feet are bigger than they used to be, and still growing, say the shoe manufacturers of America, who held their fifth annual fair here last week. A canvass of opinions among the dealers revealed that the average size of shoes that women wear to-day is from four to five, whereas twenty years ago the average was from three to five. The No. 2 size in women's shoes has practically disappeared. Only one in twenty retailers handle them.

It was also said that many firms are sending their products out with a code number in place of the actual size number. Women refused to wear the number that fitted them. Now, whatever size they ask for, whether it be two, four, or six, the dealer gives them the shoe that fits them best, and he alone knows what size she wears.

PENNSYLVANIA LINE BLOCKED

Burning Bridge Across Four Tracks—Through Trains Go by New Route.

LANCASTER, Penn., July 16.—The Pennsylvania Railroad's main line was completely blocked for hours to-night by a burning bridge, which fell across the four tracks. The bridge, which was used for wagons, spanned the railroad near the Gap, seventeen miles east of here. It caught fire about 7 o'clock to-night, supposedly from sparks from a locomotive. It was all wood.

Some time was lost in getting help, and when a section gang arrived the bridge and its timber supports had fallen. There was no water near and the gang was compelled to extingish the fire by shoveling earth upon it. Before this was accomplished the ties were burned and some of the rails were warped from the heat.

All through trains to-night were run over the Pennsylvania's freight lines from Parkesburg, twenty-five miles east of here, to Columbia and Harrisburg.

ALLIGATOR KILLS CHILDREN.

Monster Drawn Up in Seine by Their Father, Negro Fisherman.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE VILLAGE, Ark., July 16.—Two small children of Amos Smith, a negro fisherman who was helping State officers to haul a seine in Lake Chico, were killed by a large alligator Saturday. The alligator was in the seine.

It was at sundown and the party had finished their week's duties, which consisted of hauling in an immense net from the middle of the lake in search of fish that live on game fish.

The fishermen knew they had big game, but were not prepared for the alligator when he was hauled in shore. When the monster swished its tail they fled. The two negro children, who were standing by looking on, were left to the mercy of the alligator, which afterward escaped to the water.

FIFTH CHOLERA DEATH FROM LINER MOLTKE

DOTY DEFENDS HIS COURSE

Replies to Censure Attributed to Judge Bulger in Interview Which the Commissioner Denies Having Made.

Another passenger of the steamship Moltke died of cholera yesterday, making the fifth since the liner arrived in this port twelve days ago. Yesterday's victim was a woman, Erzebet Szaboliseki, 25 years old. After having been detained at Hoffman Island with the Moltke's 200 other passengers, she developed the preliminary symptoms of cholera last Tuesday, and was immediately taken to Swinburne Island, where she died yesterday morning. Her body will be cremated on Swinburne Island, as the bodies of the other cholera victims have been.

There were fifteen cases of cholera yesterday on Swinburne Island. Four persons who have been detained on Hoffman Island showed suspicious symptoms yesterday, and were immediately transferred to Swinburne. They were Carmana Mattuizzi, 54 years old; Francesco Arcordia, 38; Angela Pompi, 52, and Francesco Farandango, 15. Farandango's condition is considered serious. All four were Moltke passengers.

The three cholera suspects who were taken off the Anchor liner Perugia, which got in from Naples, the centre of Italy's present cholera-infected district, on Saturday, were said yesterday at Quarantine to be all convalescing. They are all on Swinburne Island. The Perugia's other passengers are on Hoffman Island. The Perugia's crew, however, were allowed to remain aboard the vessel, which is anchored immediately off Quarantine.

No Alarm for Staten Island.

Dr. John T. Sprague, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent of Staten Island, and Health Officer F. De Revere have analyzed cultures of the blood of the wife and four children of Patrick Cushing, the Hoffman Island watchman, who died of cholera on Swinburne Island last Saturday after spending part of a day in a ward at St. Vincent's Hospital, West New Brighton. These physicians said yesterday that these cultures showed no trace of cholera germs. They made a similar reassuring report after analyzing blood cultures taken from Mrs. Miller and her five children, who share the Cushings's house at 14 Fingerboard Road, West New Brighton.

Several yarns started yesterday in the neighborhood of St. Vincent's Hospital and of the quarantined Cushing home regarding the dangers of the cholera infection having been spread. One yarn was that Cushing hadn't been discharged from Hoffman Island last Monday, but had gone to town on a spree with two other employes. The other employes were still at large, according to the rumor, and the health officers were looking for them. Both Dr. Doty and the Staten Island health authorities said that there was nothing in this story.

Another rumor was that when Cushing had first applied for treatment in St. Vincent's Hospital, he was put in a ward with four other patients. The hospital authorities denied this yesterday, and added that they had put the hospital attendant who took care of Cushing under quarantine in a small pavilion on the hospital grounds, where he will be kept under observation for ten days.

Bulger Interview Angers Doty.

Angered by remarks attributed to Judge Charles N. Bulger, the Commissioner appointed by Gov. Dix to investigate Quarantine conditions, which appeared in The World yesterday, Health Officer Doty struck back at his accusers yesterday for the first time since the Quarantine investigation began.

Judge Bulger was quoted as saying that he wished "some courageous newspaper would sit up and tell of the condition of affairs at the entrance of the port and show it up." He was also quoted as saying that Dr. Doty had been guilty of gross negligence in having allowed Hoffman Island employes to come to this city to testify at the investigation without having fumigated their clothes, and that the separation of passengers of different suspected ships by means of a rope on Hoffman Island was not a sufficient protection against infection. Another remark attributed to the Commissioner was that "Gov. Dix could remove Dr. Doty by a stroke of the pen," and he was made to imply throughout the interview that he intended to recommend to Gov. Dix that Dr. Doty be removed.

Judge Bulger, at his home in Oswego, yesterday denied that he had authorized any interview regarding Dr. Doty.

"I would have no right to make any comments on Dr. Doty or any phase of the investigation now being conducted by me," he said. "I am obliged to report to Gov. Dix, and any comments I may have to make on the Doty matter will be made in that report."

Dr. Doty's Statement.

Dr. Doty, taking it for granted that Judge Bulger was quoted correctly, made this statement:

"The comments in this morning's New York World of Charles N. Bulger, appointed by Gov. Dix as Commissioner for the purpose of conducting an investigation of the Health Officer's department, are so calculated to alarm the public in the very midst of a threatened invasion of cholera that I feel justified in making a reply. Although Commissioner Bulger assured me at the beginning of the investigation that it would be conducted fairly he has given the interview to The World before allowing me to offer a word of testimony as to the real facts.

"'What can Dr. Doty, Health Officer of the Port, mean when he allows five men who have been in daily contact with persons suffering from Asiatic cholera to come to this city in the same clothes they wore when among the cholera victims, and touch elbows with every one they meet?' is the question propounded by Judge Bulger in The World interview.

"The facts of this particular matter are these: The five men referred to were called as witnesses by Commissioner Bulger and Mr. Dushkind, and were permitted by me to be absent from duty at Hoffman Island for this purpose. Cholera is not transmitted by clothing or by the air; there is, therefore, no danger whatever from contact with a person who has been in the presence of the disease. Moreover, the men to whom Commissioner Bulger refers were not in contact with cholera patients, as these are not kept at Hoffman Island, but are removed to Swinburne Island when conditions indicate the first possible approach of the disease, Hoffman Island being the place where passengers are kept for observation when they have been exposed on shipboard to quarantinable diseases.

"There is not the slightest truth in the statement of Commissioner Bulger that on Hoffman Island we find persons suffering from smallpox, yellow fever, and cholera herded together, mingling at will with only a rope separating them. There are no cases of these diseases kept at Hoffman Island; they are all removed from incoming vessels to Swinburne Island for care and treatment, and only those persons are transferred to Hoffman Island who have been exposed to an infectious disease. Moreover, yellow fever is only transmitted by a variety of the mosquito which does not exist in this section of the country.

"The rope that is referred to in Commissioner Bulger's further comment on this subject is not used for the purpose of separating those who have been exposed to the various diseases, but merely to separate the sexes, particularly as a measure of protection to young girls. It is very unusual for groups of passengers to be transferred to Hoffman Island from more than two vessels at the same time. The important condition to meet, however, in dealing with this situation is that they shall be kept under constant medical observation night and day in order that the earliest symptoms of disease may be detected, rather than that they should be placed in groups according to their removal from various steamships. These are recognized principles in modern sanitation. For this purpose medical officers now on duty at Hoffman Island visit the apartments of these persons nearly every hour night and day.

"Commissioner Bulger refers to a man named Cushing, temporarily employed by this department as watchman at Hoffman Island. He left the service before any case of cholera developed at Hoffman Island; therefore, there was no apparent reason for his detention. Even under these conditions, as a matter of extreme precaution, such persons are kept under some form of observation by this department. It was in this manner that Cushing was found at St. Vincent's Hospital, and I ordered his transfer to Swinburne Island before the character of his disease was determined.

The Present Cholera Problem.

"At the present time we are dealing with a very serious outbreak of cholera in Italy and other sections of the Mediterranean which has increased in virulence since last year, and a majority of the vessels which have recently come from Italy have either brought actual cases of this disease or furnished evidence of its having occurred in transit. It is with great difficulty that the latter condition is established, and it is only through the most exhaustive bacteriological examination that I am able to secure these facts.

"The people who are now held at Hoffman Island were removed from a vessel on which there had occurred in transit a number of somewhat suspicious cases. The cases were mild, and I could secure no definite bacteriological evidence concerning this. However, because the ship came from a cholera infected district in Europe I believed that they were cholera cases, and therefore kept the crew on board the vessel and removed all steerage passengers to Hoffman Island for observation. Since then nine cases of the disease have occurred.

"Since last year's experience with cholera we have learned for the first time of the frequency of what are known as 'cholera carriers,' who carry the organism of the disease in the intestinal tract, and may develop it at any time or may transmit the disease to others without ever presenting symptoms of cholera in themselves; this is a factor which we never before have dealt with, and we now know it is a most common cause for the transmission of the disease where apparently no previous cases have occurred.

"It is probable that these cases which are now presenting themselves at Hoffman Island are cholera carriers; however, it is not impossible that through these some local infection may have taken place. In order to discover this I have ordered that specimens be taken from the intestinal tract of all those now held at Hoffman Island.

"It is in the presence of these conditions, when the confidence of the public in this department should not be unjustly disturbed or its facilities for protecting the public health diminished, that Commissioner Bulger, the man appointed to investigate this department, makes the amazing declaration in The New York World. He makes it in the midst of the hearing, with no testimony in reply yet offered. The quarantine departments of every port in this country are facing a very serious and onerous task during the coming Summer. It is not improbable that many vessels arriving from the cholera-infected districts of Italy within the next few weeks will bring one or more cases of this disease.

"The crisis is drawing heavily on the resources of my department. It also puts an unusual strain on the discipline of the department staff. Commissioner Bulger's publicly printed statements regarding Quarantine conditions affect not only the public mind, but the discipline at Quarantine, on which the public is largely dependent for its health and safety.

"I have sedulously refrained from making any comment on the Quarantine investigation so far, because I was assured by Commissioner Bulger at the investigation's outset that all the testimony would be carefully sifted and considered after an opportunity was given me to be heard by him before he made a public report of his findings. I feel myself justified, therefore, in making this answer to Commissioner Bulger's attack."

Charles Dushkind, the lawyer representing Dr. Doty's accusers, sent yesterday to Commissioner Bulger an open letter suggesting that he call Gov. Dix's attention at once to the situation at Quarantine, for the purpose of having the Quarantine Station "placed at once in charge of a competent sanitarian."

FEDERAL OFFICIALS HELPING.

Closer Watch Ordered at Cholera Ports Abroad.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The Public Health and Marine Hospital Service is watching closely the cholera situation in New York and is co-operating in every way with the health authorities of that State. One of the experts of the service will leave to-morrow to give further assistance to the State officials and instructions have been sent to agents abroad at all suspected ports to exert increased vigilance and to call for further assistance if needed.

Government officials here scout the idea that there is any danger of anything approaching an epidemic. They believe the few cases are merely sporadic, and such as have been discovered have been carefully traced and all means have been employed to prevent a spread.

In furtherance of this the service only recently doubled the length of time which suspects may be held for observation. This, it is believed, practically will render impossible the escape of any cases through the rigid quarantine.

FOLLOWED WOMAN TOO FAR.

Well-Dressed Man, Arrested, Says It Was Unintentional—Freed.

A well-dressed man who said he was Albert Warwick, an engineer, living in the Hotel Arlington, 18 West Twenty-fifth Street, was arrested last night on the charge of annoying Mrs. Harry Buxton, who lives at the Hotel Raymond, 42 East Twenty-eighth Street. Mrs. Buxton said he followed her from Madison Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street to Forty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue.

"What have you got to say?" asked the Lieutenant when the prisoner reached the East Fifty-first Street Station.

"My dear Lieutenant," replied Warwick, "if this woman charges me with following her, I must have done so unconsciously. I left my hotel at 6 o'clock, and by a coincidence my route was the same as hers."

Mrs. Buxton said she and her husband left the Raymond shortly before 6 o'clock and walked along Madison Avenue. At Thirty-ninth Street, she said, her husband's attention was attracted to a child that had been lost, and he stopped to call a patrolman, telling her to walk on. As she did so, she said, Warwick followed her, and to avoid him she walked through Forty-sixth Street to Fifth Avenue. The man was still behind her, she said, so she called Patrolman Murphy.

Mr. Buxton, who accompanied his wife to the station, declared that she had been annoyed in a similar manner three times in the last few months. Warwick was held on a charge of disorderly conduct.

In the Men's Night Court Warwick insisted that it was a mere coincidence that he had followed the same route as Mrs. Buxton, and Magistrate O'Connor discharged him.

City Brevities.

The Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman will hold evening services through this entire week, except on Saturday, in the Tent Evangel, in West 124th Street, between Amsterdam and Morningside Avenues.

Gen. Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, is to be the guest of honor at a dinner in the Broadway Central Hotel to-morrow evening, arranged by the Italians of New York, headed by James E. March, Giovanni Vicario, Frank L. Frugone, G. N. Francolini, and Nicola Grilli.

Two hundred west side and Harlem physicians and surgeons entertained at dinner at the Hotel Carlos, in West Twenty-fourth Street, last night, Dr. John Peter Viscardi, an honor graduate of the '11 Medical School class of the New York University.

ASSEMBLYMAN LEVY HELD FOR SPEEDING

PAROLED IN LAWYER'S CARE

With Friends the Assemblyman Was Out for a Sunday Drive and Tried to Pass a Fast Team.

Special to The New York Times.

CATSKILL, N. Y., July 16.—Aaron J. Levy of the Fourth Assembly District, New York, whose election bill has been the subject of criticism during the past few weeks, was arrested to-day at Tannersville for breaking the speed laws and for cruelty to animals.

The Assemblyman telephoned to the Dolan stables this afternoon for a team and two-seated surry to drive from Hunter, where he was stoping, to Tannersville, another resort five miles away. Mr. Dolan sent a team known as "the ponies" to the Assemblyman, who with his secretary and two other men started for their destination.

According to Tannersville witnesses the Assemblyman attempted to pass another carriage and a race followed, during which the speed laws of the village were broken and the horses abused. Officer Delemater of Tannersville had his attention attracted by the furious pace at which the rig was driven, and ordered the driver to stop.

Two members of the party disappeared, leaving the Assemblyman and his secretary to face the situation. The officer took them to the village lockup, making a charge against them of fast driving and cruelty to animals.

Mr. Levy sent for a local attorney and demanded an immediate hearing. Justice Showers was called and the defendants were arraigned. Edward Lackay, who represented them, entered a plea of not guilty, and the defendants were remanded in the custody of their counsel for appearance to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock, when the trial will be held. Every effort is being made to-night to hush the matter up.

Dolan, the liveryman who supplied the team, was telephoned to come to the Assemblyman's assistance, and arrived in twelve minutes in an automobile. Levy's lawyer to-night said that the defendants had been immediately discharged and that the arrest was due to mistaken identity. It is expected that the case will be dropped, owing to the influence of Assemblyman Levy's friends here.

Efforts to reach Assemblyman Levy to-night were unsuccessful.

Banker Causes Arrest of Cruel Driver.

On complaint of Samuel M. Jarvis of Mamaroneck, N. Y., Vice President of the National Bank of Cuba, with offices at 1 Wall Street, John Degney, a driver of 789 Second Avenue, was arrested yesterday at Forty-third Street and Lexington Avenue on the charge of cruelty to animals. Mr. Jarvis reported that he saw Degney beating his horse with the heavy end of a whip, and when asked to stop, he said, Degney cursed him and told him to mind his own business.

FORTUNE TELLERS ARRESTED

Waldo's Detectives Raid the Tents of Eight Women at Rockaway.

Four Central Office detectives, armed with warrants issued by Magistrate Gilsey of the Far Rockaway Police Court, made a raid on the tents of the women fortune tellers, situated all along the boardwalk at Rockaway Beach yesterday, and arrested eight of them. The women were taken to the Rockaway Beach police station, charged with violation of Section 899 of the Code of Criminal Procedure relating to receiving pay for foretelling the future. All of them were bailed out and then returned to their respective tents on the boardwalk. They will be arraigned before Magisrate Gilroy this morning.

This action, it was said, was in response to many complaints which had been made to Commissioner Waldo in person and by letters. The detectives sent to make the arrests were all members of the Commissioner's staff, and had gone from one tent to another to have their palms read.

The fortune-tellers, it is said, had well-dressed, suave men in their employ, who mingled among the guests at hotels and derived commissions on all "trade" directed to the tents. There is complaint that Capt. Halpin of the Rockaway Beach Police Station has done little to suppress the fortune-tellers, of whom there were about twenty in his precinct.

FLIER WRECKED, SEVEN HURT.

Rochester & Pittsburg Train Leaves Rails on Straightaway Track.

BRADFORD, Penn., July 16.—The Rochester & Pittsburg Flier on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad went into a ditch near Farmersville, N. Y., this forenoon while running on a straightaway track, and seven of the seventeen passengers were injured. The train was made up of a combination car, three day coaches, and a café and observation car.

The wheels of the tender left the rails and the cars followed, careening against an embankment, which prevented their turning over. A wrecking train was sent from East Salamanca and a relief train from here. The passengers after medical attention were sent on their journey on a special train.

The passengers whose injuries consist of sprains and bruises are Harry Solomon, Syracuse, N. Y.; F. P. Sherwood, Williamsport, Penn.; Genevieve Maher, Row City, Penn.; Simon Casence, Rochester, N. Y.; Margaret Farrand, Rochester; Albert C. Enos, McKeesport, Penn., and D. C. Hines, (colored,) Rochester.

Officials of the road are unable to explain the cause of the wreck.

GUNDA ATTACKS HIS KEEPER.

Zoo's Trick Elephant Jealous Because Alice Got Her Breakfast First.

Keepers at the Bronx Zoo are becoming a little alarmed over Gunda, the trick elephant. His reputation used to be of the best, and certainly his tricks were the admiration of all observers. Yesterday he made a savage attack on Keeper Walter Thuman, who escaped through the bars just in time.

Thuman says that Gunda's anger must have been due to jealousy. It is the custom of the keeper to give Gunda his hay before waiting on the other elephants. Yesterday, however, he first supplied Alice, in the next stall. This, he says, must have made Gunda very angry and caused him to make the attack when he entered the inclosure. Thuman kept the elephant off with the pitchfork while he backed out.

Thuman is the only keeper who has been able to enter Gunda's precincts recently. Dick Richards was formerly his keeper. Six weeks ago Gunda charged at him, and he had a narrow escape. Gunda grabbed the bars in front of the stall and bent them badly. With some fears that a second attack might lead to the elephant's escape the bars were reinforced with heavy cross-bars. With Thuman in disfavor, the Zoo officers don't know who will be able to care for the irascible Gunda.

JUDY A BAD ACTOR

As Well as a Bad Racer—Runs Away to Coney Island Creek.

Not at all chagrined at having failed to get any nearer Washington than Darby, Penn., Judy, the elephant who on Friday surrendered the race simultaneously with the other contestant, Jennie, the donkey, returned to Luna Park yesterday in a furniture van. Usually docile and unspeakably indolent, Judy astonished all her friends at home by showing a new restlessness. Twice she broke out of her stall, once to wander for a half hour beneath the arches of the scenic railway, and the second time to escape gloriously to a vacant lot between Neptune Avenue and the Coney Island Creek.

There she floundered around in the grass and mud, and was so extremely pleased with herself that she got angry when attendants tried to capture her. She filled her trunk with water from the creek, and cleaned up the press agents who were darting about taking notes. Finally they bribed her with food, and with repletion came docility.

Fred Thompson studied Judy's behavior thoughtfully, and then explained it with one word—wanderlust. He recalled her old days as a traveling elephant with the Wild West Show, and gave it as his belief that the little jaunt through Jersey had stirred forgotten springs within her ancient heart. The press agents asked how to spell wanderlust, and then rushed to tell a waiting world how Judy had spent the day.

1,000 STILL HOMELESS.

Carload of Provisions a Day Needed for Michigan Fire Victims.

BAY CITY, Mich., July 16.—Rains continued to-day throughout Northeastern Michigan, effectually dissipating all fire danger in the forest districts for the present.

Relief work at Oscoda and Au Sable, however, will be a big task. Free transportation has been suspended by the railroads, and there are now nearly 1,000 men, women, and children at the site of their former homes. The H. M. Loute's Sons Company, whose great lumber manufacturing plants were destroyed, is urging the men to leave and seek work elsewhere, as it cannot rebuild under sixty days, and will not rebuild on a scale nearly as large as its original plant.

This place is beginning to feel the strain of the continued demand for relief. It has already sent six carloads of provisions and three of clothing and other supplies. One carload of provisions will leave to-morrow morning to supply to-morrow's demand, but a carload of provisions a day will be needed. A carload of stoves and another of bedding and blankets is on the way from Detroit, but with 1,000 persons to care for the task of relief will be the largest the State has ever had.

CHINESE MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Modern College to Fight Plagues to Open Doors in February.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 16.—The establishment of a great medical school in China which will aim to train the Chinese to the necessity of adopting Western systems of medicine and hygiene is about to become a reality, and next February the doors of the big college will be thrown open in Shanghai.

The project is one which has as sponsors physicians connected with the Harvard Medical School, one of whom, Dr. Martin Russ Edwards, will head the new school. He will have a corps of fifteen Harvard assistants. Among those interested in the project are President Taft and President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard.

Dr. Edwards believes that the establishment of the school will be the beginning of the end of the dread bubonic plague, of cholera, and leprosy.

ACCUSES ALASKA DELEGATE.

Syndicate Attorney Says He's Angry at Failing to Get Syndicate Post.

SALEM, Ore., July 16.—"Delegate Wickersham of Alaska is angry because the Alaska Syndicate would not employ him at $15,000 a year as its attorney, and is trying to get back," said Attorney John A. Carson of this city, special attorney for the Alaska Syndicate, after reading the charges brought by the Alaskan Delegate against Attorney General Wickersham.

Regarding the letter which was submitted as evidence intended to show that witnesses for the Government had been controlled, Carson, the writer of the epistle to Capt. Jarvis, said those witnesses, although brought to Juneau by the Government, were not called upon to testify by the prosecution, as their evidence was found by the Federal counsel to be material to the defense. Naturally, he explained, the defense subpoenaed the witnesses and paid them.

"The Government has sent different agents to Seattle, Alaska, and elsewhere, and has found that the conduct in the Hazey case was regular," Carson said.

Rains Benefit Texas Cotton.

DALLAS, Texas, July 16.—Reports from 102 counties in Texas, comprising the majority of cotton counties and considerably more than two-thirds of the State, indicate that cotton is now in good condition since the rains of ten days ago. Further rains fell to-day over a wide area.

CROSSROADS CRASH HURTS TWO AUTOISTS

Both Machines Wrecked in a Collision on the North Hempstead Turnpike.

VICTIMS COLUMBUS MEN

One Has Broken Arm and Another Badly Cut Over the Eyes—Family Party in Other Car Escapes.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., July 16.—"Send an ambulance quickly. There's been a bad auto smash near here," was the message telephoned to the Nassau County Hospital here this afternoon from the Arlington Inn on the North Hempstead Turnpike, about a quarter of a mile from Foley's Corner, which marks the division of Roslyn and Manhasset. Dr. Morris hurried to the inn and found there William B. Lynde and Charles A. Liewer, both of Columbus, Ohio, who are stopping temporarily at the Hotel Ansonia in Manhattan.

Lynde's right arm was broken, and Liewer had several bad cuts on the head and face, some of which extended so close to his eyes as to make it a question if his sight might not be injured. The men were conscious.

They said that with J. Duffy and H. Liewer, a brother of Charles Liewer, they had left the Hotel Ansonia at 10 o'clock in the morning in a touring car for a spin down the island. They were returning along the turnpike when the accident occurred. A car in which Lynde and Liewer said they believed Morris Weinberger, his wife, mother, and child of Port Washington were riding was speeding along the Sharzonton Road, which crossed the turnpike at right angles at Foley's Corner.

Each road is concealed from the view of a person driving on the other by thick clumps of foliage, and Mr. Liewer, who was driving the car, did not see Mr. Weinberger's car until the latter shot across the turnpike directly in front of him.

Mr. Liewer applied his emergency brake, but could not halt his car, which struck the Weinberger machine just over the rear wheel. The shock sent Mr. Liewer's car flying across the road into the ditch, where it overturned.

The Weinberger car was sent to the other side of the road and the rear wheels and whole rear construction ripped from under it. It did not overturn, however, and its occupants were injured only to the extent of receiving a severe shaking up and some bruises.

Mr. Liewer and his companions were thrown clear of the car and fell on the grassy bank beside the road. This prevented them from receiving serious injuries, but all four were knocked senseless. A farmer who had seen the crash from his home near by ran to the Arlington Inn, where he told the proprietor, Florence Denny, what had happened, and asked that the ambulance be called.

Mr. Denny remained at the inn to direct the ambulance, but before it arrived the injured men were brought to the inn in another automobile which had picked them up. The occupants of this car said that still another car had carried the Weinberger party to their home, and that none of the latter was injured, though both the women were suffering from shock.

Liewer and Lynde were carried to the Nassau County Hospital, where it was said last night that their injuries would not be mortal.

At the Ansonia Hotel it was said last night that the men who were in the auto smash were all residents of Columbus, here on a visit, and that they had registered together on July 14.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN FARMING.

He's Resting, Though Doing Chores and Building a Stone Bungalow.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ABINGTON, Mass., July 16.—John L. Sullivan, former champion heavyweight pugilist, is enjoying life upon the farm here doing the hundred odd chores that makes the life of the farmer what it is.

"No Muldoon farm for me," says Mr. Sullivan.

"I have had a hard season on the stage and now I want to rusticate. "But I'm always glad to see my old friends.

"I'm really interested in that farm of mine. It's a good farm, and I'm going to make it first-class for a Summer place."

This is the way John L. rests:

WOMAN DIES WHILE DRIVING.

Frightened When Horse Shies at Motor Cycle and Heart Fails.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., July 16.—Miss Alla Scott, an elderly woman, driving a spirited horse near Jacksonville this afternoon became so badly frightened when the animal reared at the sight of a motor cycle that she dropped dead in the seat of the carriage. Recently she purchased a new horse, and this afternoon invited a woman relative to take a ride with her. They had not proceeded far along the road when a motor cycle came along. The noise of the machine so frightened the horse that it jumped to one side of the road, down a small ditch, and then reared on its hind legs and became entangled in the harness.

The sudden shying of the horse completely unnerved the woman, and with a gasp she fell over dead on the seat. Her companion quickly grasped the reins with one hand and managed to quiet the horse, while holding Miss Scott's body with the other.

DOCTOR HENPECKED, HE SAYS

Wealthy Physician Married 25 Years and His Wife Seeks Separation.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., July 16.—Dr. Julius E. Moith, one of the best-known practicing physicians in the Hudson Valley and for thirty years a physician here, has been sued by his wife for separation.

Dr. Moith, so his wife alleges, left her about a month ago, taking all his effects and establishing his office with his brother in another part of the town. The couple have been married for twenty-five years. Dr. Moith, in discussing the case, said that he has been henpecked for twenty-five years, and that's long enough.

The Moith family is one of the best known in the Hudson Valley. Both Dr. and Mrs. Moith are considered very wealthy in their own names.

VOTE ON RECIPROCITY SOON.

Should Be Passed by Saturday—Fight on Wool Next.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The last week of the long struggle in Congress for the enactment of the President's pet Canadian measure begins to-morrow. On Saturday it will pass the Senate precisely as it came from the House, and that will send it to the President for his signature without the delay of a conference. The final disposition of the reciprocity bill will leave the way clear for other tariff measures and bills of a general sort.

It seems to have been shown that the divided Republican majority is unable to control the Senate. Even in so small a matter as the election of a President pro tem. Mr. Gallinger could not secure a majority following, and on every ballot the Democratic candidate had a slight plurality. Thus it apears that the most that the Republican leaders can now do is to choose between the evils offered them by insurgents and Democarts.

This is particularly true in regard to the Wool bill, which will come up for a vote next after reciprocity. The La Follette insurgent draft of that measure puts 11 per cent. higher protection on wool than the Democratic bill does, but by the New England Senators, at least, the insurgent bill, on account of its sweeping cuts in duties on woolen by-products, is regarded with more alarm than is Mr. Underwood's bill from the House. On the other hand, it commends itself to standpatters of the grazing States on account of its high protection on raw wool. Thus, talk runs that the insurgents and Democrats will in the end be able to pass a measure without the aid or consent of the regulars.

As to the free list bill, New England Senators are saying pessimistically that the House measure will pass unamended, so that the President will not be embarrassed by vetoing a second Republican or insurgent tariff bill. The insurgents, however, who consider reciprocity a slap at local industries, now talk of supporting a free list measure as a blow at the Eastern manufacturers, though nominally as a "compensation" to the farmers of the Middle West for reciprocity.

MORE COOL WEATHER.

Official Meteorologists Predict It All Over Country for This Week.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Following the hot wave that recently caused suffering all over the whole country and was responsible for many deaths, this week's weather promises to furnish surprises in the other direction. The Weather Bureau sees in an abnormally high barometric pressure on the Atlantic Ocean the conditions that will usher in a cool wave.

"This pressure distribution is strongly indicative of temperatures below the seasonal average the coming week," says the Weather Bureau report, "in practically all parts of the country from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic Coast. The week will open with generally fair weather east of the Rocky Mountains, except that showers are probable Monday in the Middle Atlantic and New England States, and during the next several days in the South Atlantic and Gulf States. An area of unsettled weather and showers will develop over the Middle West about Thursday, and thence spread eastward to Atlantic States by the latter part of the week."

Cousin of President Taft Dead.

Joseph H. Taft, a third cousin of President Taft, died suddenly yesterday at the home of his brother, Thomas Taft, of Cornwall-on-Hudson. Death was caused by paralysis. Mr. Taft was an architect and formerly had an office in New York, but for two years failing health had kept him in retirement. His wife survives him. Mr. Taft was a member of the Players' Club.

TWENTY-ONE KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

None in the Heading in Pennsylvania Shaft Escaped the Deadly Afterdamp.

RESCUERS WERE HELD BACK

To Late to Do Anything Except to Care for the Dead When They Effected an Entrance.

DUBOIS, Penn., July 16.—Twenty-one miners were killed in an explosion in the shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke Company's mine at Sykesville, nine miles from here, last night. The explosion occurred at 9:30, but it was after midnight before the extent of the disaster was known. All of the dead except three are foreigners. The explosion was slight and little damage was done in the mine, but the deadly afterdamp caused the loss of life.

Three sets of brothers and a father and son are numbered among the dead. George and John Heek and Nick Pavelick and his 15-year-old son were found by the rescuers locked in each other's arms. None of the bodies were mutilated and only a few showed any burns.

Eleven of the men in one heading had apparently made ready to escape, for they carried their dinner pails and were headed for the opening.

The first intimation of the explosion at the surface was when the safety door on the fan blew open and the machinery began to run wild. It was surmised there was trouble below, but it was hours before rescuers could enter the mine. It took some time to get to the place of the accident, a mile and a half from the opening, because the rescuers were obliged to carry oxygen with them.

All but four of the bodies were brought to the foot of the shaft to-day, and were kept there until the others were recovered. Four bodies were buried beneath a cave-in at a heading, and were not recovered until late to-day. The State Police from Punxsutawney were called to police the vicinity of the shaft.

Neither mine officials nor Mine Inspectors are able to assign a cause for the explosion, as there are no survivors from which to gain an explanation, but it is the general belief that some of the men drilled into a pocket of gas. The shaft is known as a non-gaseous one, and Fire Boss John Brown reports he was through the heading where the explosion occurred an hour before and found no trace of gas.

Six men working in another heading of the mine at the time of the accident knew nothing of the explosion until the compressed air stopped their drills. They realized something had happened, but did not know the nature of it until they met a party of rescuers coming for them.

When the rescue car of the Bureau of Mines arrived here it was not needed, as all the men were dead and the air in the mine had been cleared.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD TONIC

There! That's what you should take these nerve-exhausting days

Such is the sincere advice of all who have felt the wonderfully beneficial effects of Sanatogen.

You who have worked hard all winter and spring are poorly equipped to bear the hardships of our exhausting summer. Already there is an accumulation of fatigue and weariness which makes it all the harder for you to stand the added drain of heat and humidity. Nerves become irritable, the brain dull and weary, appetite fails, digestion is deranged—in short, life is made miserable.

What you urgently need is a genuine, natural food-tonic which will convey to the exhausted nerve-cells the very food they are craving, which will actually nourish and build up the starved tissues, which will spur the appetite, regenerate digestion and all the time act as a rejuvenating, vitalizing tonic upon brain and nerves.

These requirements are ideally fulfilled by Sanatogen, the food-tonic, which has achieved fame in every civilized land by virtue of its remarkably reconstructive power. Sanatogen is compounded as Nature compounds her ingredients of the blood and nerve; pure albumen and organic phosphorous in scientific combination (protected by U. S. Letters Patent).

The world's highest medical authorities have openly acclaimed the unique and beneficent action of Sanatogen; over 15,000 practicing physicians have reported their observations of its splendid effects. Leading brain workers everywhere are fervent in praising it. That is why you may use Sanatogen with the utmost confidence that it will prove an ideal tonic food during the hot season, that it will strengthen and vitalize the overworked body and brain, that it will invigorate appetite and digestion—in short, that it will wonderfully aid the forces that make for perfect health.

"Our Nerves of To-morrow"—FREE

This is a beautifully illustrated treatise by a physician of note, absorbingly interesting and brimful of facts and information that are of vital interest to you. The book also contains evidence of the value of Sanatogen which is as remarkable as it is conclusive.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes: $1.00, $1.90, $3.60

INDEPENDENT ICEMEN FROZEN OUT, THEY SAY

Charge the Knickerbocker Company with Trying to Put Them Out of Business.

HOLD MEETING TO PROTEST

Plenty in Brooklyn and Jersey, They Say—District Attorney's Office Gets Their Evidence.

A mass meeting of independent ice dealers was held yesterday afternoon in Concordia Hall, between Second and Third Avenues, to protest against the alleged discrimination of the Knickerbocker Ice Company and other ice concerns alleged to be in alliance with it in favor of ice dealers and concerns other than the independents. There were about fifty dealers present, and several made speeches in which they told of the difficulties they had in getting ice to supply their customers. Several said the trust had repeatedly refused to sell to them at any price.

Joseph Sheridan, an independent dealer, who went to Mayor Gaynor with his troubles last week, presided in place of District Attorney Whitman, who it had been announced would preside. Mr. Whitman did not appear, but sent Assistant District Attorneys De Ford and Deming and Reuben Peckham, a lawyer, to represent his office and get whatever evidence there was to be had of violation of the law by the Knickerbocker and allied companies.

In opening the meeting Sheridan referred at length to what he termed the situation along the river fronts, particularly at the docks controlled by the Knickerbocker Ice Company and certain so-called independent concerns, which he said had a working agreement with the larger concern. The small independent dealer, he said, was unable to get ice from many of these docks at any price. Ten dollars a ton, he said, would not get any if offered by certain independents. He mentioned as among the concerns having a working agreement with the Knickerbocker Ice Company the National, the North River and the Yonkers Ice companies.

Sheridan said that when the independent dealer went to some of the ice docks he would be met with the answer that there was not a pound of ice in the river.

"We can't get a bit in New York," Sheridan added, "yet we can go over to Hoboken, Jersey City or Brooklyn and get all we want."

Sheridan then told of his visit to Mayor Gaynor. He said the Mayor treated him with great consideration and had offered to give him a letter to President Oler of the Knickerbocker Ice Company. He said that the Mayor had told him that President Oler had informed him he would look after the poor.

"I would like to face Oler," said Sheridan, "and show him how he has been freezing out the independent ice men, and I can prove it, too."

Assemblyman John D. Herrick said the trust was trying to get the independents' customers away.

"The reason," he said, "they sent out reports in the Winter that there was a shortage of ice was to lead you independent dealers to the slaughter and take your customers away from you. The only way for you men to win is to organize and fight with a solid front. In organization lies your only hope."

Edward Smith of 515 West Forty-sixth Street said that the trust had been instrumental in taking some of his customers by making it almost impossible for him to get ice to supply his trade.

Mr. De Ford asked all who had evidence to remain behind and dictate their stories to stenographers from the District Attorney's office.

"If there has been a violation of law," he said, "the District Attorney will proceed against the guilty, no matter who they are."

The State was represented by Deputy Attorney General McQuaid, while the Police Department sent Capt. Clark of the East Thirty-fifth Street station and several detectives. It was announced that another mass meeting will be held later this week.

The evidence now in the hands of the District Attorney with that obtained yesterday will be presented to Magistrate Appleton when he begins his hearings tomorrow.

Michael Egan of 225 East Twenty-fifth Street. He dictated this and then swore ta it:

> Michael Egan deposes and swears that he has been in the ice business for thirty years, and lives at 225 East Twenty-fifth Street, and that about two months ago he went to the dock of the Knickerbocker Ice Company, at the foot of East Thirty-first Street, and asked the weighmaster to sell him some ice; that the weighmaster said to him, "I can't give you any"; that Egan said, "Why?" and was answered by the weighmaster, "We want to put you independent dealers out of business," and that they have since refused to sell him ice.

John Luisi of 469 Second Avenue told the investigators he had been unable to obtain ice from a small plant on the east side since the Knickerbocker Ice Company bought it out, and had been compelled to pay $5 a ton to the Knickerbocker, at the foot of West Twenty-ninth Street. Formerly he paid $2 a ton. Independent wholesalers are selling ice today at $2 a ton, he said.

FREED FROM MISSING WIFE.

James Avery Gets Decree—Wife Disappeared Seven Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., July 16.—A decree of divorce was granted here yesterday to James A. Avery, who has been an engineer in the Government service, employed in the Philippines and on the Panama Canal, Seven years ago Mrs. Avery disappeared and since that time the husband has kept up a ceaseless search for her, but without avail.

Shortly after his graduation from Yale Avery met his future wife in Philadelphia. Later, after securing employment as a Government engineer in the Philippines, and after saving his earnings and receiving a small fortune from his parents in Alabama, he sent to Philadelphia for the young woman to go to China to meet him and be married. The American Consul married them in Shanghai ten years ago.

While traveling through China both fell seriously ill and spent much of their money on doctors and in hospitals. They had enough money to bring them to New York, but were forced to pawn some of their jewels to obtain their baggage from the Custom House. It was soon after this that Mrs. Avery disappeared.

STRAY SHOT HIT GRIFENHAGEN

Register's Brother Recovering from Wound Inflicted by Skylarking Boys.

Jacob Grifenhagen, brother of Max S. Grifenhagen, the City Register, was shot on the morning of Saturday, July 8, while he was in the annex of his bottling factory at 502 West Twenty-fifth Street. So little was said of the matter at the time that even his employes did not know of it until yesterday, as Max Grifenhagen had explained his brother's absence by saying that he had gone to the country for a few weeks.

Mr. Grifenhagen was on the top floor of the annex talking to his manager, Macaulay, when a revolver bullet entered his side. The shot was fired from just across the street, where there is an empty lot, and it is supposed that it came from a pistol with which several boys were playing. The wound was slight and Mr. Grifenhagen was able to go home and consult his family physician, Dr. Leonard Adair, of 836 West 145th Street. He is now in a private sanitarium in Harlem and is rapidly recovering.

He is a bachelor and lives in an apartment at 785 St. Nicholas Avenue. Nothing was known there of the shooting, but it was said that Mr. Grifenhagen had telephoned to the apartment on Saturday on a business matter and appeared to be all right. He had not said he was in a hospital.

The shooting was not reported to the police until last Monday. Then Max Grifenhagen rang up the old West Twentieth Street Station and reported the matter. An error was made in the entry as it appeared on the official blotter. This read:

> Jacob Grifenhagen accidentally shot while standing at window on fifth floor of premises, 249 Tenth Avenue, at 10:30 A. M., July 8.

The office of the bottling concern is on the first floor of the Tenth Avenue building, which has only four stories. Mr. Grifenhagen was in the annex on Twenty-fifth Street, when he was shot.

Detective William A. Carlson has been working on the case, but the police both at the station and at headquarters professed ignorance yesterday as to what he had discovered.

TRAPPED IN THE SUBWAY.

Special Policeman Arrests Man for Robbing a Sleeper.

Maxwell Rider, 22 years old, who said he was a clerk living at 235 West Fifteenth Street, was arraigned before Magistrate Herbert in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, on a charge of pocket picking, to which he pleaded not guilty. The complainant was Fred W. Meyer, a chauffeur.

Special Subway Policeman Warren Johnson was at the Fourteenth Street station and saw Rider, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, sit down beside the chauffeur, who was asleep on the bench. He says Rider spread out a newspaper before the sleeper, then placed his right arm around him and reached into his hip pocket. The policeman said he watched from behind a pillar on the mezzanine floor while Rider put his hand into the chauffeur's pocket no less than three times, extracted some articles, which he placed in his own pocket, then folded his paper and walked away.

When Rider was searched, a cardcase containing a coupon for an automobile tire, a railroad ticket, a restaurant meal ticket and a book of cigarette papers were found on him. These Meyer identified as his, and said they were worth $34. Rider said he found them on the seat beside Meyer, and did not know whose they were.

Magistrate Herbert congratulated the policeman for his cleverness and tact, and held Rider in $2,500 bail for General Sessions.

Edward M. Shepard Improves.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 16.—"Slightly better," was the word to-day regarding Edward M. Shepard, who is seriously ill at his Summer home here. Dr. T. I. Henning said there was little material change in Mr. Shepard's condition, but that the indications showed a slight improvement. Dr. Henning remains at the Shepard residence every night.

OLD BARGE OFFICE NOW TO BE RAZED

Customs Offices in Temporary Quarters While New $500,000 Structure Is Going Up.

LONG A BATTERY LANDMARK

Present Structure Completed 29 Years Ago—Plans for New One Cut to Fit Scant Appropriation.

Several trucks drove up to the Barge Office at the Battery on Saturday, and within a few minutes after they had backed into position the work of moving the customs offices there was under way. Within a week workmen will begin to tear down the building which has long been a landmark at the city's end. A more decorative and modern building will be erected on the site, unless the appropriation gives out. Already the Government has had to alter the style of the structure because the appropriation was not enough to carry out the first plans.

Collector Loeb has provided temporary quarters for the customs staff in the Custom House and the Appraisers' Stores, thereby saving the Government some $25,000, which was appropriated for rental, expenses pending the building of the new Barge Office. The question of where to put the men ousted from the Barge Office has been a problem that has demanded the attention of the Collector for some months. At one time the Treasury Department considered leasing from the city an entire floor in the Staten Island ferryhouse. That involved the building of elevators and making other changes which would have cost $10,000. So the project has been abandoned.

The Custom House, which shelters a number of Government bureaus and divisions not under the control of the Collector, is already crowded, and in order to take in those from the Barge Office economy of space had to be studied. It was found that in some cases rooms assigned to deputies were larger than required and that some of the rooms given up to messengers were much larger than rooms into which have been crowded many clerks. So room was made for the Barge Office men.

The offices to be transferred to the Custom House are the Revenue Cutter Service under Capt. Hamlet, the Fifth Division under Deputy Surveyor Raczkiewicz, which has to do with the collection of baggage duties, and the Second and Third Divisions, which take in the boarding officers, the Inspectors detailed for baggage inspection. The immigration boarding officers, the office for the handling of immigrant baggage, and the other offices which have to do with the Immigration Service will move to the temporary ferry landing and house built on the pier just to the west of the present Barge Office and in Battery Park. The Appraisers will be housed in the Appraiser's Stores, Christopher and Washington Streets.

It is probable that the temporary changes forced by the tearing down of the old Barge Office will result in some permanent changes. The Collector and Surveyor Henry are considering the advisability of having the boarding officers and the Inspectors assigned to pier duty permanently quartered in the Custom House. This and other questions will be carefully studied.

The new Barge Office will cost $500,000 and will be used jointly by the Customs and Immigration Departments. The present plans call for a two-story brick building of Spanish style and crowned by a red tile roof. At one corner it was planned to put an eighty-foot tower. This, it is said, is to be abandoned to bring the cost of construction within the present scant appropriation. It may take nearly two years to complete the building.

The establishment of the present Barge Office was authorized by Congress in March, 1876. The land was bought in April of that year from the city for $10,000. The present gray stone building, which was completed in December, 1882, and to which was added later the corrugated iron structure in the rear, cost $300,000.

The first Barge Office was located upon a strip of land formed by the juncture of the river and two inlets, one running up Broad Street and the other up Whitehall Street. After the War of 1812 the Barge Office was moved to the foot of Whitehall Street.

CAPTIVE ALL NIGHT AFLOAT.

Grave Charge Against Boy and Man Who Kept Girl in Rowboat.

Jennie Pierman, 15 years old, daughter of Joseph Pierman of 660 Wythe Avenue, Williamsburg, obtained permission from her mother to go out with some friends Saturday evening. She did not return at midnight, and her father, going in search of her, traced her to the recreation pier at the foot of Metropolitan Avenue. He learned that the girl had been taken out upon the East River in a rowboat by Joseph Vogt, 17 years old, of 230 Union Avenue, and Frank Phillips, 24 years, of 41 Havemeyer Street. The latter lets rowboats at the pier.

Detectives O'Connor and Fleishman were sent to the pier by Capt. Flood of the Bedford Avenue Police Station early yesterday morning with the father. They saw a rowboat at a distance coming toward the pier. It contained the missing girl and Vogt and Phillips. The girl seemed to be in a state of almost complete collapse, but she recognized her father and screamed to him to rescue her. The man and boy in the boat thereupon turned it about and pulled away from shore. The detectives put out in a boat and pursued the other craft.

Both the small boats were nearly swamped by swells from passing steamers. The detectives overawed the fugitives and compelled them to return to the pier. Only the presence of the policemen prevented Pierman from attacking the two young men. Miss Pierman said that she had been out in the boat all night and had been maltreated by her captors. An ambulance surgeon attended her, and she was sent to the shelter of the Children's Society.

Vogt and Phillips were locked up on her complaint, and will be arraigned today in the Manhattan Avenue Court.

KILL SEVEN-FOOT RATTLER.

Body Thicker Than a Man's Arm, Say the Brave Jersey Hunters.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., July 16.—A rattlesnake seven feet long, the first one seen in Bloomfield, it is said, since 1873, was killed to-day by Charles Grieshaber, a market gardener of Belleville Avenue, and two of his employes. The snake was discovered by Mrs. John Herrmann of 93 Belleville Avenue in the yard of her home. She was picking a dish of raspberries, when her attention was attracted by a peculiar sound. She discovered the large reptile only a few feet away from her. As the snake moved toward her she screamed, dropped the dish of berries, and ran toward home.

Grieshaber and his men went to the spot and found the snake. They killed it with clubs. Grieshaber says that he has killed many snakes in the last fifty-five years, but this was the longest he ever saw. The body was thicker than a man's arm.

WAITED TO GET INTO PRISON.

Lawyer Who Took Township Funds Gave Himself Up to Serve Sentence.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., July 16.—Horace Codington, a disbarred Somerset County lawyer, convicted of having misappropriated township funds and sentenced to eighteen months in State Prison, gave himself up to the prison authorities yesterday, but he could not be received, because the commitment papers had not arrived. Codington said he dreaded being taken to prison by an officer, and therefore he had come to the prison to surrender.

The ex-lawyer was obliged to wait several hours at the prison gate until the papers arrived; and then he was promptly locked up. As the township has lost no money through Codington's peculation, a petition is being circulated to be presented to the Court of Pardons for his parole.

SURE NAGLE WILL WIN 69TH REGT. ELECTION

Friends Say Tammany Is Backing His Campaign for Lieutenant Colonel.

COL. CONLEY AGAINST HIM

District Leader Has No Vote, but He Is Said to Have Enough Friends in the Line to Insure Promotion.

Indications are that Second Lieut. Percival E. Nagle, Battalion Quartermaster in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, National Guard of New York, and Tammany leader of the Thirtieth Assembly District, will be elected to-night Lieutenant Colonel of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. Lieut. Nagle was a candidate for Colonel last year, and although he was then, as now, only a Second Lieutenant, he came within one vote of getting the place. His opponent at that time was Lieut. Col. Louis D. Conley, whose vote for himself accomplished Nagle's defeat. Had Col. Conley refrained from voting, it would have been a tie, while had he voted for Nagle, the latter would have been elected Col. Duffy's successor.

The election which resulted in Conley's promotion to the Colonelcy was held on April 21, 1910, and was one of the closest contests for a commission in the history of the National Guard of this State. Up to the last minute the result was in doubt. Only the line officers voted, and when the ballots were counted it was found that Conley had fourteen and Nagle thirteen votes. Nagle, not being a line officer, had no vote, whereas Conley, being more fortunate in that respect, did, and was able to swing the election his way. Conley had been elected Lieutenant Colonel a year before by a close vote. His opponent on that occasion was H. H. Rogers, Jr.

It was said yesterday that when the officers begin voting to-night they will have at least three candidates to choose from, despite the fact that Lieut. Nagle is the only avowed candidate at this time. Others whose names may be proposed for second in command of the regiment are Major Philip E. Reville of the Sixty-ninth and Lieut. Col. Kerby of the old Eighth Regiment. As was the case last year, when Conley was elected Colonel, Lieut. Nagle will have no vote to-night. His friends, however, say that he has enough supporters to insure his election.

If elected, Nagle will be physically the biggest National Guard officer above the rank of Major in this State, if not in the entire country. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs as much as President Taft. He is well proportioned, however, and his 300 pounds and more are practically all bone and muscle.

Nagle was one of the New York National Guard officers sent to San Antonio for duty with the regulars under Gen. Carter last Winter. He made himself one of the most popular militia officers in the great camp. He was assigned to duty with the Seventeenth United States Infantry, and was entertained by Major George W. Martin of that regiment, who is almost as big physically as is Nagle. The combined weight of Nagle and Martin was estimated to have been more than 550 pounds.

It has been openly intimated that Tammany influences are at work in Nagle's behalf in the election to-night. Also it is said that he and Col. Conley do not agree in many matters pertaining to the regiment, and that the commanding officer strongly opposes Nagle's promotion to the second highest position in the regiment.

The election will take place between 8 and 9 o'clock to-night in the board room of the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street.

SURE CANADA WILL OPPOSE.

Premier of Ontario Quotes Taft to Show Reciprocity Won't Do.

Sir James Pliney Whitney, Premier of the Province of Ontario, who returned yesterday on the White Star liner Cedric, spoke strongly against reciprocity between the United States and Canada.

"I am and always have been opposed to reciprocity," he said, "and I am sanguine that when the people of Canada look carefully into the matter they will oppose it.

"I admire and respect President Taft, but need advance no further argument against reciprocity from the Canadian standpoint that three utterances of his in urging it on this side. The speeches referred to are to the following effect:

"That Canada has now come to the parting of the ways; she must either seek to bind herself more closely to the mother country or—." Here Sir James stopped, leaving the end to be supplied by the listener. He went on to the next speech, that unless the United States toow advantage of the present opportunity to break up the attempt to bind the British Empire more closely ogether, she would never get such another opportunity. The third saying of the President's he quoted was that the American farmer would be able to sell more produce in the event of reciprocity.

"This is enough to convince any one that reciprocity would not be for Canada's benefit," said Sir James. "The present Speaker of the House at Washington has said things that also show the same conclusion.

"Canada has now grown to be a nation. Her lines of transportation are settled and secure. The effect of reciprocity would be to disrupt these lines and to divide the country into two sections, east and west, diverting trade to America which should properly belong to Canada.

"The growth of the Dominion depends on its strengthening the ties that bind it to the mother country."

Sir James is returning to Ontario after a two months' trip to attend the coronation.

MRS. WOW CHONG BRAVE.

Goes to Wow's Aid with a Flatiron, but Customer Beats Her, Too.

Mrs. Wow Chong played a valiant part in the laundry of her husband at 178 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday when trouble arose over the demand for two shirts by Abraham Wolsson, a plumber, of 528 East 136th Street.

According to the Chongs, Wolsson wanted to pay only 10 cents for the work which had been done on the shirts, whereas 20 cents was due. The argument became a fist fight, and then Mrs. Chong ran from a rear room with a flatiron. Later, when Mrs. Chong was complaining to the police, she said Wolsson had knocked her down and taken the iron away from her, and in doing so inflicted many bruises. Patrolman Duance found all three parties to the row struggling around the room and took them to the station. Wolsson was locked up on a charge of assault.

The Musical Value Of A Player-Piano Is Determined By The Player-Action It Contains

It frequently happens that many people have a decided preference in favor of some particular 'make' of piano.

They are not unlikely to let this influence them in choosing a player-piano, but they can make no greater mistake than to make a selection on the strength of the name of the piano alone.

When you buy a player-piano in reality you buy two things.

The Piano—and the Ability to Play It

No matter how good the piano may be, the music will be no better than the player contained in the piano can make it.

You should consider the piano—but you should consider first the player-action. It is the player which makes the piano of value to you.

It is the player which either gives you, or fails to give you, the power to play in a manner to give genuine pleasure to yourself and others.

It is a fact that there is but one player-action that has received serious musical recognition from the highest authorities, such as Paderewski, Strauss, Josef Hofmann, Moszkowski, Rosenthal, Debussy and a hundred other of the greatest living composers, pianists and teachers—That is

The Pianola

Their expert opinions are on record to the effect that the Pianola is the one player with which satisfactory feeling and expression can be given to the music. You may verify this at Aeolian Hall, where the Pianola is shown both as a separate player adaptable to any piano, and as a Pianola Piano in combination with these world-famous instruments—

The Steinway, The Weber, The Steck, The Wheelock, The Stuyvesant

You are invited not only to hear these superb Pianola Pianos, but to play them yourself. You will find you can do so after a few moments of instruction.

SPECIAL:—A limited number of Exchanged Pianola Pianos and Pianolas (in perfect order and fully guaranteed) at greatly reduced prices.

The great July sale of Men's Shirts
the most important event of its kind

¶ The importance of this offering is first apparent in the quantity, notably apparent in the quality, and chiefly apparent in the values. The quantity is explained by the fact that we took nearly eleven thousand shirts from this manufacturer in order to consummate the transaction at our own prices. This, incidentally, also explains the values. As for the quality of these shirts, this is explained by the fact that the maker owes his reputation to the consistent high quality of his products.

¶ That, in a nutshell, is the story, though we are reluctant to dismiss the matter so briefly, for the merit of this offering is worthy of all the emphasis we can give it. But we believe that the foregoing, coupled with the statements that follow, is sufficient to quicken your interest in a sale offering such remarkable values.

GAMBOA WOULD IMPEACH DE LA BARRA

MIGHT HAVE STOPPED FIGHTS

Revolutionary Organ Censures Madero for Enjoying Himself at Time of Massacre.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—José Maria Gamboa, former Secretary to the Committee on Foreign Relations, will to-morrow demand before the Standing Committee of Congress the impeachment of President de la Barra and the Cabinet for alleged culpable negligence in connection with the Puebla fights and the Covadonga massacre.

Señor Gamboa asserts that President de la Barra failed to take measures which prudence demanded. On the other hand, El Pais, which is known as the revolutionary organ and which was stopped for a time by Diaz shortly before the fall of the former régime, censures what it calls the apparent callousness of Madero in attending a round of gayeties at Puebla in spite of the tragic occurrences in the city and vicinity.

El Pais says that Red Cross doctors, after visiting Covadonga, interviewed Madero at Puebla, and urged him to take steps for the protection of the factory and inmates. Madero, it continues, said he was sorry, but could do nothing.

"Our disillusionment was increased," the doctors are quoted as saying, "when, on leaving the house where Madero was a guest, we heard the clink of glasses and bursts of laughter in the banqueting room."

President de la Barra canceled his engagement to be present last night at the gala performance at the theatre in connection with the French colony's celebration of July 14, as a mark of condolence to the Puebla and Covadonga sufferers.

Zapata has not moved from the State of Morelos.

PUEBLA, July 16.—Francisco I. Madero returned to this city to-day. He was received with the usual demonstrations at all points along the route.

At Atlixco Madero commissioned Major Roque Gonzales Garza to carry on the immediate work of disbanding the Maderista troops. He told about 1,500 men of Gen. Garcia's command that they should not regard the Rurales and Federals as enemies, but rather as brothers, inasmuch as they were all working to uphold the law and preserve order.

The followers of Zapata, who were not in the neighborhood of Atlixco, were ordered to return to that place and surrender their arms.

MADEIRA FOR MANUEL.

2,000 Men Join Portuguese Royalists—Priests Fight in Religious Fray.

LISBON, July 16.—It is reported that 2,000 men from the Island of Madeira, where the populace are all ardent Monarchists, have joined the Portuguese Royalists in Spain and are now awaiting a large consignment of arms and ammunition from Belgium to replace those seized recently.

The Diaro Popolar says that the religious question continues to be the cause of rioting and disorders throughout the country. Yesterday, at Povoa de Llanhoso, a religious procession ended in violent collisions between Catholics and Republicans. Some priests joined in the fray, dealing lusty blows right and left. Troops finally intervened and restored order. The priests throughout the whole of Northern Portugal have refused the pensions offered by the Government.

ST. DIE FÊTES CONTINUE.

Bacon Replies to Tributes to Us at Dinner Celebrating America's Naming.

ST. DIE, France, July 16.—The Franco-American fêtes in honor of the naming of America continued to-day. The American Ambassador, Robert Bacon, and M. Lebrun, the French Minister of the Colonies, after an automobile trip through the picturesque outskirts of the town, proceeded to the City Hall, where the municipality gave a banquet in honor of the distinguished guests.

M. Lebrun proposed the health of the American Ambassador. He spoke in English, saying that the French Government was glad to take part in the fêtes, because it afforded France an opportunity of replying to the expressions of sympathy with France in America, which were especially numerous this year, and of deducing from these a certain guarantee that no material difficulty could affect the bonds of confidence and friendship which united the two countries.

Ambassador Bacon, in reply, said that his presence at the fêtes as the representative of his Government proved that the United States had forgotten neither her baptism nor the sword which France had thrown into the scale for her independence.

"The image of St. Dié, where America received her name," said the Ambassador, "takes a place in our hearts beside Versailles, where America contracted with France an indissoluble alliance."

Toasts were drunk to President Fallières and President Taft. The celebration closed with an aviation exhibition at the aerodrome. Twenty thousand persons saw brilliant flights by Sommer and Nieuport.

BALLOONIST FOUND DAZED ON THE BEACH

Fell Into the Ocean, Says Roberts, the Theatre Aeronaut—Doesn't Know How He Got Ashore.

HIS DIRIGIBLE IS MISSING

Says He Started in It on Saturday Over the Keith Circuit—Not Sure Where He Went Except Into the Water.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 16.—"Jimmy" de Forest, a sporting man and athlete, who takes a run along the beach here every morning, surprised Policeman John Carroll at 5 o'clock this morning by telling him he had found, lying unconscious and only partly clothed, on the beach, 300 yards east of the Deal Casino. A J. Roberts, the aeronaut, who was reported to have set sail at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in his dirigible from the roof of Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, in New York, to fly to Keith's Theatre in Philadelphia. De Forest said Roberts needed restoratives, and Carroll got some ammonia and whisky and followed De Forest to the beach.

There was Roberts, partly conscious but seemingly dazed. He revived under the policeman's treatment and declared that he didn't know how he had got on the beach, nor how long he had been there when De Forest found him. He said he had dropped into the sea with his dirigible, about a mile off shore, between 9 and 10 o'clock last night and had swum about until he was exhausted. Finally he found a log and had rested on this. Then, apparently, he sank into a stupor, he said, for he didn't recall reaching the beach, and supposed he must have been washed up by the waves while practically unconscious.

Roberts was taken to De Forest's training quarters in West Allenhurst, where he was besieged with visitors. To all he declared that he didn't recall reaching the beach. His mystification about the method of his saving was fully matched by that of his listeners, especially the members of the Deal Life Saving crew. These men had patroled the beach until after midnight, yet none of them had come on Roberts, though De Forest said he found him lying within a few yards of the life savers' course along the beach. Neither had any of them heard the whirr of his motor, though Roberts declared that he was within 300 yards of the shore at one time.

The crews of two fishing smacks which lay at anchor off the beach all night were equally astounded by Roberts's story. There had been men on watch throughout the night, which was brightly lighted by the moon, yet they had not sighted the aviator nor heard his engine. How Roberts could have reached the beach was a mystery to them, they declared, and Roberts cheerfully conceded that he was equally in the dark.

Many boats put out to-day, but no trace of the aeronaut's dirigible rewarded a thorough search of the near-by waters. Roberts might have dropped out of the sky for all the evidence to show that he reached here in any other way.

The aeronaut seemed decidedly uncertain, also, about every detail of his aerial trip. He didn't know where he had been, though he declared he landed once when only about eight miles, he thought, from New York. He said he quickly resumed his flight and sailed steadily till 9 o'clock last night.

His whole flight, he thought, had been southward, though he wasn't certain about the places over which he flew. Except for the stop which, he says, he made in an unknown locality, he flew steadily till he sighted the sea. It was dark then, and he could see lights twinkling on the shore. He decided to land there, and worked his ship within three hundred yards of the shore when a sudden gust of wind carried him out to sea. For an hour, he said, he worked to get back, throwing out all his ballast and testing the upper air currents. He was still being blown seaward, however, when he suddenly determined to abandon his airship.

He was a mile from shore when his craft struck the water. He was thrown clear of the wreckage and started to swim. He is a strong swimmer and there was little tide running, so that he felt sure of reaching the beach safely. His strength became exhausted, however, and had it not been for the log which he encountered, Roberts said he would have drowned. With this he kept himself afloat, but his progress was slow, and he said he thought it must have been after midnight when he reached the beach.

Roberts said he was much concerned over the loss of his craft. He said the dirigible was one which he had brought from England, and that he had hoped to use it in competition at the approaching Chicago aero meet. It was 110 feet long, he said, by 20 feet wide, and was made by Astra in Paris. It was equipped with a 40 horse power motor, which he said he valued at $2,500, and he offered a reward of $1,000 for the recovery of the engine.

Roberts spent most of the morning and afternoon at the training quarters, but presently said he felt fully recovered from the effects of his experience and took the next train for New York.

Roberts's story of his flight and his landing was received with some incredulity by the life savers and skippers who were on the beach or awake on their boats all night, for none saw or heard him. De Forest and Policeman Carroll are known as truthful men, however, so that all together Asbury Park is somewhat uncertain how to regard the marvelous flight and rescue of the aviator.

HILL'S TRUST REMEDY.

It Is a Law Requiring Concerns to Show Paid-Up Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 16.—"There would be no trusts in the accepted meaning of the term," said James J. Hill, "if we had a Federal law requiring every corporation to prove that its capital stock is fully paid up before it is allowed to do business. That would prevent false inflation of values and the wide sale of stock in enterprises that are not solidly founded."

Mr. Hill would not discuss financial matters in detail.

"The people of this country," he said, "must adopt a more sane atitude toward our large business enterprises, and wiser laws must be devised for their regulation.

"There is plenty of money in the country," he went on, "and it is being offered at a low rate of interest for short time loans, but little of it seems to be going into the creation of new business enterprises. On the contrary, much of our money is going abroad for investment."

Regarding crop conditions, Mr. Hill said:

"From what I learn I do not think the whole crop of the country will be sufficient to lend any great degree of animation to the National industries. Along our line conditions are fair. In Western North Dakota crops will be affected by drought. Montana and Northern Minnesota are good, but South Dakota is in bad shape. Corn, however, should be a fair crop there, and flax reports are good, so that South Dakota will not suffer so badly."

POLICE SEEK NEW YORKER.

Wife Says That After Divorce Finn Frolich Kidnapped His Child.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 16.—The police are looking for Finn Frolich, who is described as a New York sculptor, charged with kidnapping his three-months-old daughter last Wednesday from the home of the mother, Mrs. Helen M. Frolich, West Seattle. Yesterday Mrs. Frolich obtained a decree of divorce from him on the ground of cruelty and non-support.

Frolich, who came here during the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, was divorced from a former wife three months prior to his marriage to the second wife on July 5, 1910. He is said to have gone to the latter's home while she was absent and took the child away. No trace of him or the child has been found.

TERRELL ATTACKS HOKE SMITH AGAIN

Senator Declares He Will Not Go Back to Washington and Urges Governor to Resign.

SMITH WILL STAY IN OFFICE

Belief That He Purposes Dispensing Patronage—Many Voted for Him to to Get Him Out of State Affairs.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 16.—In an open letter addressed to Gov. Hoke Smith, which will be published to-morrow, United States Senator Joseph M. Terrell declares he will not return to Washington, and attacks Gov. Smith for not resigning the executive office at once and accepting the United States Senatorship, for which he was chosen by the Legislature last week.

Senator Terrell says: "I am no longer Senator, and unless he qualifies Senator A. O. Bacon is the only representative of Georgia in the United States Senate. My pair is canceled and the Vice President has been notified. Hence, it is with Gov. Smith whether he will remain in Georgia to intermeddle in State politics or go to Washington. I refuse to serve as Senator and yield compliance to his political necessities.

"The letter of Gov. Smith brought it more clearly to view that he intended to remain Governor for the ostensible purpose of carrying out policies, when it was for the real purpose of dispensing patronage as a politician. Many supported him on the theory that it would dispense with him in Georgia politics, but his conduct is a prophecy of his intended interference.

"I was impressed with that habitual arrogance and domination and disregard of principles which has characterized him. I further thought that this high-handedness and despotic conduct were all reflected in his arrogant letter to me, an ex-Governor and ex-United States Senator, when he bade me obey his direction. It occurred to me that he did it all in defiance of the people's right and in expectation that Georgians would forget before the next election his unpardonable course and re-elect him to a position which calls for unselfishness, self-sacrifice, and pure patriotism.

"If Gov. Smith can postpone his performance of Senatorial duties for a week, he may do so for a year, or during the entire gubernatorial term."

NEW MATTEAWAN CHARGES.

Lees Asks State Senators to Agitate for Asylum Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 16.—Charging that there have been several murder cases at the Matteawan State Hospital in the last few years, "if not according to legal evidence, at least morally so," and that the cost of running the asylum has increased out of all proportion to the advance in the cost of living, Norman A. Lees, who has been active in bringing charges of maladministration against Dr. Robert B. Lamb, now retired, as head of the institution, and his assistant, Dr. Amos T. Baker, sent a long letter to-day to Senator Frawley and Senator Stillwell, asking them to renew the agitation for the passage of a resolution providing for a legislative inquiry at Matteawan.

Lees declares that the food that has been given the patients is bad and in some instances has resulted in severe illness. He says that Dr. Baker has been "whitewashing" investigations of alleged brutality and that the Assistant Superintendent has knowingly overlooked gross assaults upon men and women patients. He declares that the cost of maintenance per capita has advanced from $165 to $231 a year and that the food has been at times fit "only for pigs."

SAN FRANCISCO VICE FIGHT.

Citizens Will Again Try to Oust the Labor Administration.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.—Preparations for another political battle to oust the labor control of the city are now well under way, and one of the big issues of the campaign, as before, will be that of protected vice. Mayor P. M. McCarthy intends to be elected again if he can, and already hostile organizations are being perfected to prevent the misuse of the election machinery. It is feared that the Election Board, which is in the control of the labor party, will pack the various boards which have to do with the casting of ballots, and that all kinds of frauds will be perpetrated.

Conditions in the dive quarter of the city are now almost as bad as they were under the old Ruef-Schmitz régime. For some time the McCarthy administration made an apparent pretense of keeping on the lid, but early this month there were reports that it would be taken off and that the Barbary Coast would have all its old-time freedom.

D. Augustin White was made the Chief of Police. He has had a good standing in the community, and much was expected of him. Suddenly, however, it was announced that the Thalia, known for years as one of the most notorious dance halls on the Pacific Coast, would be reopened. It had been closed for months because of public sentiment. It had its "grand opening" on July 6, and that night was marked by a celebration in the dive district. Up to that time there had been general obedience of the reform ordinance which provides that between 1 and 6 o'clock in the mornings there shall be no music in dance halls and saloons. This was openly violated on all sides. Barkers in front of dance halls openly shouted, "Dancing all night," and the promise was kept.

This condition has continued ever since, and there has been little interference by the police. It is charged by reform organizations that one of the purposes of this leniency, besides that of levying tribute on vice, is to bring to the city hundreds of persons of the underworld who will be used in election frauds.

ANCIENT CUPS FOR MRS. SAGE

Gives Communion Set for Silver Presented Church by Relative in 1785.

HANOVER, Mass., July 16.—A solid silver communion set, valued at about $700, is to be presented to the First Congregational Church of Hanover Centre by Mrs. Russell Sage of New York, widow of the financier, in exchange for two ancient silver communion cups which her great-great-grandfather, Deacon Thomas Josselyn of Hanover, presented the society in 1785.

Mrs. Sage learned of the gift of the cups through her genealogical records, and, writing to Hanover Centre, found that the cups were still in existence. Desiring them for her private museum at Sag Harbor, L. I., she offered to furnish a full communion set in exchange, and the church accepted the offer.

THE ELECTRIC ROADSTER

People of Moderate Means Can Afford an Electric

Those who think they cannot afford the pleasure, comfort and convenience of automobiling, should look into the economy of the Electric. The initial cost of an Electric is very moderate. And, since anyone can drive it with the utmost ease and safety, there is no expense for a chauffeur. Being lightest in weight, and operating with the minimum of vibration, the repair cost is insignificant.

The Cost of Upkeep Is Less Than for a Horse and Carriage

Any first class Garage will care for the car, deliver and call for it at any desired hour, at a cost of $40 a month, which includes recharging and care of the batteries. When the owner of an Electric cares for his own car, and charges the batteries himself, the cost may be as low as $10 to $20 a month.

Best for Commercial Uses, Too

The same features of economy, convenience and simplicity of operation distinguish the Electric truck and delivery wagon for business use.

We sell the current for charging, not the vehicles themselves, but are always ready to give information about them.

WOOED TWO WOMEN ON SEA TRIP HERE

Alfred Luecke's Duplicity Discovered at the Pier, and Row Starts an Official Inquiry.

ALL THREE NOW PRISONERS

He's Willing to Marry Miss Classen, and the Charming Widow Schulze is Disconsolate.

The fascinations of Alfred Luecke of Westphalia, a fair-haired young German, who got here yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner President Grant, led to his detention by the immigration authorities when the steamship reached her pier. With him there made the trip to the immigration station on Ellis Island Miss Dorothea Classen, a tall blonde, becomingly gowned, and Mrs. Alwine Schulze, a young widow, pink of cheek and also tall. The story of the attentions of the young man to both women, whom he met for the first time on the voyage, came out under the questions of the Immigration Inspector.

The cabin passengers were busy preparing to descend to the pier as the vessel came alongside. Among those who gathered at the rail loaded with small articles of baggage was Luecke. Behind him came Miss Classen. They smiled at each other, and as the crowd surged forward they withdrew to one side. There was an affectionate farewell in progress when Mrs. Schulze hove in sight, carrying a hand bag. She passed close to the pair, and, catching sight of them, stopped and said many words in German, principally addressed to the other young woman. The other replied with some heat, and things were beginning to boil when a steward interfered.

A watchful Immigration Inspector noticed the commotion. Both women were talking at once when he broke in to demand what all the row was about. Both started to explain. Luecke had little to say. What was said by the women was enough to make the Government official hold a court of inquiry on the spot. The group withdrew to a table in the saloon and there the story came out.

It appeared that Miss Classen, who comes from Kiel, had met the young Westphalian in the first days of the voyage from Hamburg. So had the widow. But both had met him at different times. Miss Classen had the habit of arising early in the morning and pacing the deck. In the afternoon she retired to her room. Mrs. Schulze was not an early morning riser. She usually spent the afternoons on deck. Luecke was agreeable to both, and the acquaintances progressed as the days sped. The young man devoted his mornings to walking the deck with Miss Classen and in the afternoon the widow was his deck companion. The evening called for much diplomacy. Neither knew of the attentions of the young traveler to the other. It was not until the President Grant glided alongside her Hoboken pier yesterday morning that the widow learned of the double wooing.

Luecke admitted that he had been attentive to both women during the voyage. He said that he found Mrs. Schulze an agreeable companion, and had sought her company in the afternoons when Miss Classen was not on deck. His heart, he said, really belonged to Miss Classen, and he intended to marry her. At that the young woman smiled and Mrs. Schulze looked crestfallen. As a solution of the problem the inspector decided to take all three to Ellis Island, and there to-day it is probable that Luecke will marry Miss Classen.

During the voyage of the President Grant Miss Marya Lerner, 17 years old, of Krakau, Austria, attempted suicide by jumping overboard. The physicians say the girl is suffering with acute mania. Miss Lerner had been studying music in Berlin and fell in love with her tutor. Some weeks ago she confessed to him her adoration and he told her he had a wife and several children. She became very despondent and lost her enthusiasm for music. Recently the girl decided to come to New York to visit an uncle.

On July 14, as the President Grant was nearing port, the girl went on deck evidently determined to commit suicide. She attempted to get over the rail, but was seized by her long braids of bronze-colored hair and pulleed back to the deck. Upon the arrival of the vessel yesterday she was turned over to the immigation authorities.

Otto Klein, a second-cabin passenger on the steamer New York, in from Southampton yesterday, developed symptoms of insanity during the voyage and was placed under restraint in the ship's hospital.

MOTOR BOAT OFF FOR EUROPE

Capt. Weller Leaves in His 50-Footer with Crew of Four.

Capt. John Weller, the mariner of Carlstadt, N. J., who will try to cross the Atlantic in his fifty-foot motor boat Romania, has started on his voyage. After an official farewell ae the home of the Jamaica Bay Yacht Club, the boat anchored in the North River until yesterday morning, when she moved down to the yacht basin south of Pier A at the Battery. The start was made from the Battery at noon yesterday. Capt. Weller's crew consists of Capt. William Small, Anton Mepro, Henry Struckmeyer, and Robert Weller, the owner's son.

The Romania was gay with flags as she left the yacht basin. The flag of the Jamaica Bay Yacht Club, of which Mr. Weller is a member, was snapping at the masthead. The Romania rounded the Battery and went up the East River into the Sound. The first stop will be Bridgeport, where duplicate parts of her machinery will be shiped. On Wednesday she will start for Halifax. She will stop there two days while her engines are overhauled and everything made ship-shape for breasting the Atlantic. The ten tanks of the motor boat will carry 1,200 gallons of gasoline. In her larder will be a food supply for two months, and 180 gallons of fresh water.

Capt. Weller expects to reach Queenstown, the first port of call, by Aug. 4. From there the Romania will go to Liverpool, thence to France, to Antwerp and will make a side excursion some 250 miles up the Rhine. On the return voyage Capt. Weller will cross the Atlantic by the southern route.

LOST HIS MONEY MATCHING IT

So Southerner Could Not Pay for Drinks and Is Arrested.

Jean S. Oakes of Norfolk, Va., appeared before Magistrate Herbert in Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday to answer a complaint by Lean Misheau, a waiter employed in a West Thirty-eighth Street restaurant, who said Oakes had refused to pay a bill of $6.

Oakes sat at a table for two hours ordering drinks, the waiter said, and when his bill was submitted refused to pay.

Oakes told the Magistrate that he would pay if he could communicate with his friends.

"I have been only four days in New York, your Honor," said Oakes. "Something happened to me at the table, your Honor, and I could not pay my bill——"

"What happened you?" asked the Court.

"I was matching $5 bills with two newly made acquaintances. I lost, and my new-made friends left me in the lurch."

Magistrate Herbert adjourned the case for two hours to give Oakes opportunity to communicate with his friends, but when the case was called again Oakes had failed to make good. The Court asked if the waiter would be satisfied to parole the defendant until this morning. The waiter said he would.

"I will give security," said Oakes, giving a heavy gold chain and watch fob to the waiter, who accepted the jewelry and left the court smiling.

ALMOST A RIOT AT CONEY.

Only One Car on Norton's Point Line and Transfer Method Changed.

One of the two overworked cars which run from West Eighth Street and Surf Avenue, Coney Island, to Norton's Point in Sea Gate, revolted Saturday afternoon just when the rush was getting under way, and the popular congestion and indignation resulting assumed the proportions of a small-sized riot.

On Saturday a change was introduced in the method of giving out transfers to the Sea Gate line. It has been the custom for the men at the ticket boxes, where the last ticket is dropped in the box, to supply the transfer slip on demand. Transfers are now given only at the ticket seller's window in the Coney Island stations when the last fare is paid.

When the rush came on Saturday afternoon the passengers were unaware of the change and demanded transfers after dropping their last tickets in the boxes, only to be told that they must go back to the ticket seller's window. There were times in the afternoon and at night when, because of the crowds surging past the ticket box, it was almost impossible to get back to obtain a transfer. Great confusion resulted. Men fought their way back through the crowd. Hundreds could not get back to the ticket seller's window, and so they rode on the Surf Avenue cars, paying an extra fare.

When at the terminal of the two-car line the great throng found that one car had gone out of commission it was ready for trouble. It takes one car a half hour to make the run. In this interval such a number of persons had gathered that there was a mad rush to fill the car each time that it got in. In the scrambles clothes were torn and bruises received. No attempt was made to remedy this condition of affairs. When it grew late there was the same scramble to get on the one car at the other end of the line.

QUIET ROCKAWAY NIGHTS.

Order for Garbage Collections Modified—Won't Start Till 5 A. M.

Out in the rulal Rockaway districts of Queens where persons go to rest these hot months there was a decided protest when Arrow C. Hankins, Superintendent of the Street Cleaning Bureau, announced that he was about to put into operation the plan of Commissioner Edwards in Manhattan of collecting ashes and garbage at night. The Superintendent was led to take some action because the men in his department demanded that they be relieved of work in the hot midday.

After a consultation with the Rockaway citizens on the one hand and the employes of his department on the other, Supt. Hankins decided on a compromise under which his men will go to work at 5 o'clock in the morning and finish their labors at noon of each day. This plan was tried yesterday for the first time.

If the plan works well at the Rockaways Supt. Hankins intends to give Flushing, Jamaica, Ridgewood, and Long Island City the benefit of early morning collections.

HELD AS A FAGIN.

Boys Accuse High School Student of Putting Them Up to Burglary.

Marcus Perlman, a hardware dealer of 372 East Eighth Street, reported to the police on Saturday that his store had been entered and $50 worth of goods taken. He said he suspected some boys of the neighborhood and Detective Liebers of the Union Market Station questioned 10-year-old David Eichen of 180 Avenue C and 7-year-old William Hirsch of 372 East Eighth Street, learning from them, he says, that Edward Weisenberger, a Stuyvesant High School student, sixteen years old, of 373 East Eighth Street, had forced them to commit the burglary under threats of injury.

Weisenberger was arrested yesterday and arraigned before Magistrate Butts in the Essex Market Court, who held him in $1,000 bail for examination tomorrow on a charge of impairing the morals of minors.

Young Eichen and Hirsch were kept at the Children's Society, and will be witnesses against Weisenberger.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN STOPPED AS ALIEN

Hugh Sweeney, Wounded at Chancellorsville and the Wilderness, Held at Ellis Island.

NO CITIZENSHIP PAPERS

Immigration Inspector Refuses to Accept Proof That He Draws a Pension as Conclusive.

Official red tape temporarily shut the doors of the country against Hugh Sweeney, a veteran of the civil war, who arrived yesterday in the second cabin of the Anchor liner Caledonia. Sweeney has lived in this country since he was a very young man. He is now 83 years old. He has raised a family of stalwart Americans, and one son, with whom he lives in Indianapolis, is a member of the Board of Trade of that city.

To the Immigration Inspector who examined the old man as the vessel came up the bay Sweeney told the story of his life in America. He was asked whether he could show citizenship papers, but he replied that he could not.

"My war record and my honorable discharge from the service of my country have been my citizenship right," said he. He added that for forty-eight years he had exercised every right of a citizen and that without question. As proof of what he said he produced papers showing that he has been a pensioner since 1890, and that he has recently had an increase of pension. The Inspector listened, but he decided that he would not admit the passenger. So Sweeney was sent to Ellis Island. He will probably be kept there just long enough for him to show his papers and he will then be allowed to proceed to his Indianapolis home.

The veteran was plainly vexed by being held up. He said afterward that he had made up his mind to take things as they came and not to worry. Not worrying he gave as one of the rules for a long life. He said that he was not unprepared for what had happened. He has made several visits to his birthplace, Letterkenny, Ireland. Three years ago when he returned he was halted by an Immigration Inspector and had to go through much the same experience as that of yesterday.

The old man said that he was one of the first to answer a call of President Lincoln for volunteers. He was then a a young man, just settled in that part of the country. He believed in the cause of the Union and with that enthusiasm which has made the Irish the fighting people of the world, he enlisted as a private in the Twelfth Kentucky Regiment, Volunteers. He served through a great part of the war. He was wounded at Chancellorsville and again he fell in the Wilderness. After the war he went to Indianapolis, where he settled and brought up his family. He now lives, he said, at 40 Keystone Street in that city.

"They want to know whether I am a citizen," said the old man rather sadly. "I am more of a citizen than some. I thought that fighting for a country was enough claim to citizenship."

Old Mr. Sweeney went to Ellis Island cheerfully. He expects that to-day he will start on his journey to his home in the Middle West.

THIEVES BEAT OLD MAN.

Ransack House Where He Was Supposed to Have Large Sup of Money.

Harry Morrow, who lives in Fern Street, Belleville, N. J., is a neighbor of James Buckelew, a 70-year-old truck farmer, who lives alone in a small cottage and is supposed to have saved up a large sum of money. Morrow was passing Buckelew's home yesterday when he heard groans and found the door of the cottage unlocked.

Inside he found the old man lying on the floor. His head and face were cut and one of his eyes was blackened. He was unconscious. Near him lay a straw hat, the crown battered in. Apparently it had been on the old man's head when some one struck him with a weapon like a club.

The man was attired in an old suit of clothes, and since he always made a point to dress in a special suit every Sunday morning it is supposed that he must have been attacked on Saturday afternoon or evening. He is still unconscious in St. Michael's Hospital in Newark, where Morrow had him removed.

The old man's good suit and everything else of value in the house was missing, and the police believe that some one who had heard tales of the old man's wealth expected to find it in his home. Whether the old man actually had any money there is not known. If he did the thief must have got it.

At the hospital late last night it was said that the old man's condition could not be told with certainty. He was still senseless, and the physicians had been unable to tell how badly he had been hurt.

CAUGHT WITH POCKETBOOKS.

Police Seize North Beach Gang with $348.70 on Them.

Many complaints reached the police of the Hunter's Point and Astoria Stations yesterday of the loss of pocketbooks, so Capt. Herbert Graham sent six detectives to North Beach. There, near an attraction known as Morris's Slide, at Ehret Avenue and the Boulevard, they noticed a gang of men pushing through the crowd and hustling people. They arrested them on suspicion.

At the Astoria Police Station they were found to have on them eight pocketbooks, $348.70, a valuable gold watch, two letters which should have been sent to Glasgow by the steamship Columbia on Saturday, and a number of pawntickets for jewelry.

The names of the prisoners, with the amount of cash found, were Solomon Rudolfsky, 156 Rivington Street, restaurant keeper, $116; Jacob Helman, 246 Rivington Street, paperhanger, $14; Sol Kratka, 108 East Ninety-seventh Street, peddler, $92; Samuel Argrow, 167 East Tenth Street, painter, $116; Perretz Sigarwund, clothes presser, 451 Katona Avenue, the Bronx, $2.50; Morris Kaplan, 108 East Ninety-seventh Street, peddler, 69 cents, and William Latoria, 36 Crescent Street, painter, $7.60.

FOR TAX ADJUSTMENT BILLS.

Secretaries of Three Charitable Bodies Are Quoted in Their Favor.

Announcement was made yesterday that the executive heads of the charity dispensing organizations of the city have declared for the Sullivan-Shorts bills, which are to come up for passage in the Senate this week.

Dr. Edward T. Devine, General Secretary of the Charity Organization Society; Morris D. Waldman, Secretary of the United Hebrew Charities, and John A. Kingsbury, Secretary of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, are quoted as favoring the bills.

Mr. Kingsbury says he believes that one result of their passage would be to encourage ehe construction of healthy tenements.

OUR BAD TENEMENTS AMAZE FRENCHMAN

High Official Comes Here to See if There's Anything to Learn from Our Housing System.

LABORERS' RENTS EXCESSIVE

Dr. Pranard Thinks Condition of Poor in France in This Respect Is Better Than It Is Here.

Dr. Charles Pranard, Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Assurance and Social Providence of France, who is here to look over this city's housing conditions, did not lose any time before getting to work. He only got here late Saturday, and as soon as he had had his breakfast yesterday morning he started off for the east side tenements, Italian and Jewish.

He came back to the Waldorf-Astoria, where he is staying, after a little while, saying he was somewhat depressed by what he had seen. He is trying to find out from New York how housing conditions may be improved in France, but his first glimpse of one of the biggest tenement districts in the city led him to think, he intimated, that this city had better be sending to Paris for instruction.

"I inspected several tenements in lower Manhattan," he said on his return to the hotel, "and was informed by the tenants that they are paying $5 a month rent per room. Many of these rooms are so dark that they should be vacated at once as unfit for human beings to live in. They are also veritable death traps. I am also informed that from $500 to $600 is the average earnings of unskilled laborers in New York, out of which they have to pay $180 a year for their small rooms. This is about one-third of their total income. In Paris unskilled workers earn $400 to $550 a year on the average, but their rents are only $90 to $130 for three or four rooms, that is, only a fourth to a fifth of their earnings. We feel in France that the rent should not take more than one-fourth of the earnings of the family at most."

When informed of the steps proposed here for abolishing dark rooms, Dr. Pranard said that in Paris there was a department called the Caisse Sanitaire, which has authority to take such steps as seem necessary to compel owners to make dark rooms fit for human habitation.

"In France," he continued, "we exempt certain workmen's dwellings from taxation for twelve years, but by lowering the tax rate on buildings you will lower the total taxes to be paid by the tenant, and make possible lower rents in healthy tenements which would naturally draw tenants from unhealthy ones, and tend to encourage the owners of such unhealthy tenements to construct better ones."

Dr. Pranard expressed surprise at the proximity of extremes of wealth and poverty in this city.

"The height of the buildings and the crowded traffic in the streets," he added, "exceded my expectations, and I am sure this harbor is the most wonderful in the world."

Dr. Pranard really began the strenuous life on Saturday evening, when he was rushed down to the Manhattan Beach Hotel for dinner. Among those dining with him then were Charles O'C. Hennessy, Thomas J. Skuse, and Walter T. Durack.

STEAMER RAMS SCHOONER.

Latter's Captain and Mate Sent Overboard by Impact, but Are Rescued.

BOSTON, July 16.—In a thick fog which obscured all shipping around the lower end of the cape to-day the Metropolitan steamship Herman Winter, on her way from New York to Boston, crashed into the lumber-laden two-masted schooner Nevis a half-mile south of Pollock Rip Lightship shortly before noon.

The force of the impact sent Capt. Hines and Harold M. McKenzie, first mate of the schooner, overboard. They were rescued by their own crew, who lowered a boat and had the Captain and mate back on board by the time the steamer was ready to stand by.

It was found that although the schooner was cut clean through her side below the water line, her cargo of lumber would keep her afloat, and it was decided that the steamer should take her in tow.

The men of the Nevis remained on board. Upon arrival here the schooner was beached. The Herman Winter, undamaged, proceeded to her dock. The Nevis was bound from Parrsboro, N. S., for Greenwich, Conn.

Leather Workers Postpone Strike Vote

The vote of the Fancy Leather Workers' Union on the question of a general strike for a fifty-two-hour week, 10 to 15 per cent. more pay, and a union agreement will not be taken at to-morrow's mass meeting, but will be set for a later date.

Among the speakers to-morrow night will be Calvin Wyatt, General Organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and representatives of the Women's Trades Union League.

FLYING MEN GIVE A BENEFIT.

Aerial Exhibition at Mineola to Help an Aviator's Widow.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., July 16.—Most of the aviators who have hangars at Nassau Boulevard and the Moisant Aviation School grounds here joined this afternoon in an exhibition at the latter grounds for the benefit of the widow of Marcel Penot, a French aviator who was killed by a fall in Havana last Winter. Mme. Penot lives here.

A throng of about 3,000 persons came afoot in trains and by automobile to see the fliers. A squad of Boy Scouts in camp near by volunteered to police the course and also took up a collection from the crowd for Mme. Penot's benefit. About $300 was collected.

Lee Hammond, the young operator of a Baldwin biplane, provided the major part of the afternoon's entertainment. Hammond is young and is new at the flying game, but already be has sent thrills of fear through his instructor and his friends by attempting the dips from high altitudes which Charles K. Hamilton made famous. Yesterday he made three flights, and in each of them he indulged in dip after dip, dropping swiftly from a height of 500 feet to straighten his craft out when he seemed about to plunge its nose into the ground.

Capt. Baldwin flew another of his machines and A. L. Welch and Tom Sopwith, the former in a Wright and the latter in a Howard-Wright, flew to the field from Nassau Boulevard. Welch brought Richard Sinclair on his trip over and carried J. Campbell-Wood, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, back. He flew at a height of nearly 1,000 feet, and circled the field several times. Sopwith dropped direct on the field, but afterward made a short flight around and around for the benefit of the spectators.

Andre Houpert, the instructor of the Moisant School, flying a Moisant monoplane, flew to Nassau Boulevard and back and was cheered for his perfect landing.

UNBOTTLED MILK PERIL TO BABIES

MYRIAD BACTERIA IN EXCESS

One Analysis Reveals Probable Evidence of Concoction—Co-operative Organization of Committees.

Investigation as eo the unbottled milk sold at grocery shops has convinced the Sub-Committee for the Reduction of Infant Mortality of the New York Milk Committee that there is need of a vigorous campaign to improve its quality. The attention of the Sub-Comitee was called to the subject by the compalints of the nurses whom it employs. A very large part of their time is taken up with sick babies. It is believed that a great deal of the ill-health of babies in the city can be traced to unbottled milk sold at small groceries.

An investigation was made at 200 shops within easy distance of the committee's stations, and a record was made of their saritaary condition and samples of milk were taken from them and analyzed. Inquiry was also made as to the manner in whnch the milk is handled from its source until it reaches the babies's bottles, and as to the efficacy of the regular legal inspections of the shops. The result is that the committee feels that unless something is done to improve these milk distributing agencies permanently, it is hardly likely to accomplish any effectual good.

Dr. Charles E. North of 30 Church Street has reported that of the samples which he examined bacteriologically, 60 per cent. were unfit for use and, writing to Paul E. Taylor of the New York Milk Committee, he says:

"I of course do not know just what sources these samples have been taken from, and will therefore confine myself entirely to remarks regarding the number of bacteria. I believe that there is no reason why milk should be sold containing more than 500,000 bacteria per cubic centimetre. When it contains more than 1,000,000 bacteria it indicates gross carelessness. When it contains several millions of these bacteria, as some of these samples do, and you will note a number of instances where there were more than 10,000,000 bacteria, I believe the milk is unfit for use. Large numbers of bacteria are due in general to one of three things: First, to the presence of dirt in the milk. This dirst may have contaminated the milk during its production, transportation, or delivery. Second, large numbers of bacteria are due to inefficient refrigeration. When milk becomes warm bacteria multiply with great rapidity. Third, large numbers of bacteria are due to the age of milk. Milk which is old gives bacteria an opportunity to multiply even when it has been kept cold."

John J. Connelly of the Sydenhams Laboratories examined chemically several samples which were suspected of having been made from a formula, and reports that "the specimens taken collectively are about the worst we have had to examine." Of one sample he remarks:

"The findings as a whole show a highly adulterated specimen. The butter fats are well below the normal; the percentage of sugar is also below normal. Tests for gelatine show this ingredient in small amount. Much of the fat present is extraneous. Microscopically the fatglobules are not characteristic of those found in milk."

Nevertheless Commissioner Lederle reports that in spite of the exceedingly hot weather of the first two weeks of July the infant mortality of the city compares very favorably with that of last year. Taking the deaths of infants of less than one year during the two years he reports:

Week ending July 15, all causes..	568	359
Diarrhoeal diseases	303	148
July 1-15, all causes.............	1,006	706
Jan. 1 to July 15, all causes......	8,353	8,043
Diarrhoeal diseases	1,701	1,454

The Commissioner, however, adds a warning that mothers during July and August should take particular precautions about the milk for their babies and should make full use of the milk stations. Moreover, if any baby is sick and the parents are too poor to pay for a physician, a telephone messenger to the Department of Health will always bring at any hour of the day or night a nurse or a doctor.

To perfect the organization of the different committees dealing with the pure milk problem the Association of Infants' Milk Stations has just been formed. A central office has been established at the Department of Child Hygiene at 969 Sixth Avenue and there information as to the work of the milk stations is collected and distributed. Dr. S. Josephine Baker of the Division of Child Hygiene is the Chairman of the Executive Committee and these organizations are represented: Babies' Dairies, Dr. Reuel A. Benson; New York Diet Kitchen Association, Miss Maria L. Daniels; Nathan Straus Pasteurized Milk Laboratories, Dr. Arthur R. Green; Nurses' Settlement, Miss Jane E. Hitchcock; Morningside Milk Dispensary, A. N. McCurdy; New York Milk Committee, Paul E. Taylor, and Brooklyn Children's Aid Society, Arthur E. Wakeman. Charles J. Storey is Secretary.

The new organization represents ninety milk stations, sixty-six in Manhattan, one in the Bronx, and twenty-three in Brooklyn, in which 7,000 babies are under care. The entire city has been divided into districts with a milk station in each responsible for it, and it is hoped in this way to prevent duplication of effort and to prevent [illegible] of different societies from encroaching on each other's territory.

A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

News Sheet Published in New York Reports Battles of Lexington and Concord.

The fight at Lexington, Mass., occurred on April 19, 1775, and the conflict at Concord on the day following. The first news of this beginning of the struggle for independence was made known in this city by a broadside issued here and headed: "New York, Sunday, 23d April, 1775. The following interesting Advices were this day received here by two Vessels from Newport, and by an Express by Land." The broadside contains letters sent by Stephen Hopkins from Providence, and other communications from the Committee of Correspondence. It is an extremely rare Revolutionary relic. A copy, which sold for $350 in Philadelphia recently, is doubly interesting because it contains the following account of the reception of the news in New York, written on the back in the autograph of Gen. Alexander McDougal, who afterward distinguished himself in the Revolutionary War:

> This news was received about 2 P. M. on Sunday, 23d. The Committee were called at 4 P. M., when they dispatched the intelligence by Mr. Moorbach Express to the Southward. Two Sloops, loaded with Provisions for the Troops at Boston were unloaded. A Transport, with Provisions and Stores, went down this morning. Mr. Stevens & Mr. McAdams were the principal Shippers, & appeared before the Committee, where they declared their readiness to receive and store their goods if the ship was brought up.
> Mr. McAdams also declared he would not load two Vessels, he orders to load with Provisions & Stores to Boston till things were settled. Mr. Jay & self want him & Mr. Stevens to make these declarations to the People to satisfy them, as they are enraged. This afternoon the People broke open the doors of the City Hall & took out the City Arms. I proposed to them not to remove them that night, as they could not know to whom to give them, but to place a guard on them till morning, & then deliver them out.
> Monday, 24th—A Meeting at 2 P. M. was held on the Field, at which it was in contemplation to pass a Vote to appoint Officers for the Militia. I dissuaded them from it. They said a Militia Association, was agreed to, and they passed a unanimous Vote authorizing the General Committee, with full and unlimited Power, to consult upon and determine and direct the means for their preservation in the present critical state of our Public Affairs. At our breaking up Mr. Low declared as the People of Massachusetts Bay wanted no men and fought our Battles, we ought to supply them with Provisions and ammunition, and for his part his fortune was at their service. Messrs. John Watts, Oliver De Lancey, and Mr. Watts, the Recorder, came down to one of these sloops to intimidate the People from landing the Provisions, but it did not avail.

Autographs of Gen. McDougal are rare. He was born in Scotland in 1731 and died in New York City in 1786. He was one of the New York "Sons of Liberty."

TO ACQUIRE SULGRAVE MANOR

British and American Subscriptions for English Seat of Washington.

To honor him as a Britisher, because of his birth under the British flag, and as an American because of his services in leading the first American armies and in founding the Republic, a movement has been started by the Peace Centenary Celebration Committee to purchase and preserve Sulgrave Manor, the home of George Washington's ancestors in England.

The home is to be purchased, according to the project, by a joint subscription of American and British funds. The purchase is to be made as the principal permanent accomplishment of the proposed celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking peoples.

Resolutions calling for the initiation of this international movement were passed by a sub-committee of the Celebration Committee at a meeting at 54 West Fortieth Street. Another permanent memorial of the celebration was mentioned in an annual report presented to the committee. It is to be an international bridge built by the Canadian and United States Governments, connecting New York State with Ontario Province. The opinion of the committee was that the work of organization must be conducted steadily from now on until Jan. 1, 1915, in order to mature plans for a suitable celebration in that year. Legislatures will be appealed to, and foreign Governments will be visited by accredited representatives of the movement.

Among those present at yesterday's meeting were John A. Stewart, William B. Howland, George P. Brett, Albert Shaw, Andrew B. Humphrey, T. Kennard Thompson, William H. Short, Job E. Hedges, Hamilton Holt, W. D. Forbes, and Calvin W. Rice.

DEFIES THE SUBWAY CROWD.

Passenger Carries a Portable Stool and Rides in Comfort.

Old General Public may kick at the Subway service, or lack of it, but there's at least one man who has risen above or sunk below the necessity of straphanging. He has proved that not only is necessity the mother of invention, but that invention is father, in turn, to convenience.

He is an elderly man, white of beard and hair, his kindly eyes bespectacled. The cut of his long black coat is suggestive of the priest's. Every evening he boards a Subway train at the Brooklyn Bridge. Entering the first car, he makes for the front end, where by this time every seat is taken. On to the front platform he goes, and then from his hip-pocket draws what appears to be a miniature Gatling gun with three barrels.

A spring is pressed and the three barrels shoot out, telescope fashion, becoming three legs, hinged at their middle. A triangular bit of canvas is hitched to the tops of the legs, and with a sigh of satisfaction the passenger takes his seat and reads his newspaper in coolness and comfort to 125th Street, where the stool is folded again and repocketed as he starts for home.

DR. PORTER'S ADVICE ON MILK FOR BABES

Says Death Rate Among Bottle-Fed Infants Is 25 Times as Great as Among Others.

HOW FLIES POISON MILK

State Health Commissioner's Suggestions to Mothers—Rules for Handling and Keeping Milk.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 16.—In speaking of the "Care of Milk," Dr. Eugene H. Porter, State Commissioner of Health, states that it has been clearly demonstrated that cholera infantum is dependent almost entirely upon feeding impure milk, and that the municipality must do what the individual mother cannot do, see that the milk that she purchases for the child is fit to be used for food.

Dr. Porter embodies the contents of the circular of the New York City Sanitary Milk Dealers' Association, recently issued, in which advice is given to the consumers of milk, and supplements it with some further recommendations. He says:

> Where a house is located in an isolated district it is not always possible to procure ice, so that even a makeshift refrigerator cannot be used. If this be the case, the milk may be kept fairly well by taking an ordinary butter or lard tub and putting into the bottom of it a three-inch layer of sawdust. Upon the sawdust rest a stoneware jar or crock, and surround this by sawdust. Put the milk bottles in the jar and pour into the latter sufficient water to just cover the bottles. Cover the whole with a sawdust or hay-stuffed cushion large enough to fit into the tub over the jar. The tub should be kept in the coolest place to be found, and if the above directions are carefully carried out, the temperature of the milk will seldom get more than one degree warmer than the water in the jar.

Milk bottled on the farm and kept in a temperature below 50 degrees Fahrenheit is far preferable to "dip milk," which is subject to contamination each time the can is opened, the Commissioner contends. He advises that if "dip milk" is used that it be put into an absolutely clean receptable, kept cool, and free from flies and dust. He urges cleanliness in the bottling and other handling of milk at all times. He says regarding flies in milk:

> The mother who has learned that the common house-fly is a carrier of disease would no sooner give her infant milk into which a fly has fallen than she would give it poison. When a fly alights in milk there is no way of telling whether or not its last resting place was on the slops from a sick room or on a putrefying carcass, and the only safe way is to discard that milk or heat it to the boiling point before using it.

The nursing bottle is another menace, and Dr. Porter makes these recommendations:

> Use only round bottles with round bottoms. Do not use rubber tubing; it is impossible to keep it clean. Get the simplest, most easily washed nipple obtainable. After feeding, rinse the bottle in cold or tepid water, then with hot water and a little washing soda or a good washing compound. Scrub well with a wire brush, rinse several times, then scald, and either invert in the sunlight where the air is free from dust, or fill with hot water and add a pinch of baking soda, and let stand until the next feeding; then rinse again thoroughly with hot water before pouring in the milk. Never let a nursing bottle stand unwashed or with the remains of a feeding in it; it is very difficult to make such a bottle clean from the strict sanitary standpoint.

In conclusion Dr. Porter says:

"These precautions may seem to be unnecessary. Our mothers never observed them, and we are alive to tell the tale." Dr. Porter adds:

"The answer to this is that while we survived, the general infant mortality at that time was greater than it is now, and statistics show that care in infant feeding is the greatest factor in reducing the mortality. Even now the death rate among bottle-fed babies is twenty-five times as great as it is among breast-fed infants."

The New York Sanitary Milk Dealers' Association has issued a leaflet of advice in which it says:

"Return to the ice box unusued portion of milk. Standing in the warm room will greatliy hasten the growth of germs. Keep the milk tightly covered, so that dust, dirt, and flies may not enter.

"Do not use large steel knives, shears or other heavy implements to remove the cap. Such instruments splinter the glass, particles of which may enter the milk.

"Pour the milk into clean receptacles. Dirty vessels will as readily contaminate the milk as will dust, dirt, and flies.

"Do not keep more than one day's supply of milk at a time. Order a fresh supply daily."

FIRES DRIVE OUT GRIZZLIES.

Go to New Feeding Grounds, and Oregon Stockmen Suffer.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 13.—One effect of the forest fires which swept great areas last year has been to drive a lot of grizzly bears from their former feeding grounds and make them a menace to stock. Many reports have been received here recently of the depredations of these big animals on the east slope of the Cascade Mountains, and preparations are being made to hunt them down.

The Cascade Mountains have never been known as the haunt of the grizzlies. At times they have been seen, but hunters have known that this particular range did not furnish a profusion of the berries and other food on which these bears subsist. Such as had been about this more thickly settled part of the country had almost all fallen before the rifles of hunters. In the Blue Mountains, about 200 miles to the east, however, the animals have been known to be fairly plentiful. There they have heretofore found plenty of food, and so they have not troubled the settlers and themselves have been left alone except by occasional huntsmen who have penetrated the wilds.

Great areas of the Blue Mountains and nearby ridges were burned over in the great forest fires of last year, and so this Spring the grizzlies did not find the supplies of food to which they had been accustomed. It is believed that they then wandered across the valleys to the range nearer the coast. Here they also found insufficient supplies, and so they have turned on the stock which ranges the east slope of the Cascades.

Berry Hickson, an old-time woodsman of the Upper McKenzie River, had a great surprise recently when he set out on an expedition into the Cascades. He had known of occasional grizzlies in this region in years gone by, but they had never troubled him. In the middle of one night several bears brought down one of his pack ponies and ate it. He had to guard the others on succeeding nights, and with difficulty got out of the country with any of them. He has also suffered losses in stock, and will join with other hunters in going after this big game.

FROM CLAY AFTER DUEL.

Letter Replying to Advice Not to Fight John Randolph.

An interesting letter written by Henry Clay at Washington, April 10, 1826, two days after his bloodless duel with John Randolph of Roanoke, was in a recent Philadelphia sale of autographs. It is addressed to the Rev. Mr. Bacon in reply to a letter asking Clay not to fight the duel. The famous Whig statesman and leader was a candidate for the Presidency in the election of 1824. His competitors were John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, and William H. Crawford. None of them received a majority of the electoral votes, so the election devolved upon the House of Representatives.

Clay's vote was the smallest of the four candidates, and he was therefore excluded from the House election. He threw his influence on the side of Adams, who thereby was elected. The adherents of Jackson and Crawford charged that there was a corrupt understanding between Adams and Clay, and this accusation was strengthened when Adams offered the portfolio of the Secretary of State to Clay, and the latter accepted it. This was the origin of the "bargain and corruption" charge which was so often subsequently brought against Clay, although it was a well established fact that immediately after the result of the Presidential election of 1824 became known he had declared his intention to use his influence for Adams and against Jackson.

In one of the debates in the House John Randolph of Roanoke, a descendant of Pocahontas, as sarcastic as he was eloquent and prone to indulge in gross insults of his political opponents, denounced the Administration and referred to Adams and Clay as "a combination of the Puritan and the blackleg." Clay promptly challenged Randolph to a duel and Randolph as promptly accepted. It was fought on April 8, 1826, but neither combatant was injured. In the letter to Bacon Clay says:

"I received your obliging letter of the 20th ult., full of so many kind expressions about my personal safety, the day after a late affair with Mr. R. It could not have prevented that affair, if it had been received the day before. As no injury occurred to either party, my regrets are limited to the countenance which a pernicious practice may receive from our example and to the apparent violation of religious obligation."

In 1828 Andrew Jackson was elected President, and after his inauguration Clay retired to his farm at Ashland, near Lexington, Ky. He, however, was generally recognized as the leader of the party opposed to Jackson and ran against him in 1832, but was decisively defeated, receiving only 40 electoral votes to 219 cast for his popular opponent. As Senator, however, Clay succeeded in 1833 in having resolutions adopted censuring Jackson for the removal of the public deposits from the United States Bank.

"Through the Alps to Niagara"

The desire to view Niagara Falls in itself argues one a lover of Nature's handiwork.

To go by the Lehigh Valley is to double the pleasure of your trip by seeing "The American Alps" en route.

The Lehigh is the romantic avenue to the splendors of the great cataract. Winding through beautiful valleys, skirting charming rivers and sentineled by majestic mountains, this road is concededly the great scenic line of eastern America.

It carries you through a natural art gallery, hung with wondrous landscapes and still life pictures, ever changing in the frame of your car window.

All the while you are swiftly gliding over a smooth, stone-ballasted road-bed, guarded by the most approved automatic safety signals, and with luxurious train equipment.

And you are breathing pure mountain air laden with the scent of the woods—free from soot and cinders, for the Lehigh burns Anthracite exclusively.

A glorious ride by rail, yet most of the way beside water.

Such a trip, with Niagara Falls as its climax, is as fascinating a journey as could well be imagined—it has aptly been called the Honeymoon Highway.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 16.—Vean Gregg, aided by some timely hitting, won his sixteenth victory to-day, defeating New York, 6 to 2, and letting the Naps slip into the .500 circle, close on the heels of New York, Boston, and Chicago. Gregg was not at his best. While he allowed but four scattered hits, he gave three bases on balls and hit a man. One of the presents, and the man whose anatomy was scratched, scored. Perfect pitching would have given the big southpaw a shut-out.

"Jim" Vaughn, the Yankees' southpaw, made the mistake so many pitchers have made lately when working against the Naps, starting out too strong. Instead of trying to "mix them up," he put on all the steam he had. Result, five innings of shut-out ball and then a "blow-up." This "blow-up" came in the sixth, when the Naps landed on the big left-hander for five hits and a base on balls, which, combined with neat base running, netted five runs,—enough to win with ease.

As on last Sunday, a rain just before and during the game kept the attendance down, 8,650 being the number passing through the turnstiles. But even brisk showers failed to prevent a contest, the big canvas diamond covers once more saving money for the owners. Neither team scored in the first, Cree's fine catch killing a hit for Jackson that might have meant trouble, and a double play started by Olson retiring Wolter and Hartzell, after one was out, and Wolter had lived by Turner's fumble.

Gregg's generosity to Cree in the second was transformed into a score, when the little left fielder stole second, went to third when Fisher dropped the third strike, and had to throw out Knight at first, and scored on Chase's single. Chase thought Fisher's peg was weak and was caught at second, Magner flying out to right. Chase was caught in a similar manner in the fifth, when after a single he tried to steal. In the sixth, the Yankees got their second and final run on a gift. Blair was hit, went to second on Vaughn's sacrifice, that Gregg should have thrown to second instead of first, scoring on Daniels' single. Daniels stole second, but died at third, when Wolter was easy, and Hartzell, who had walked, was caught at second. After that the Yanks never had a chance to cross the plate, Blair getting the only hit after the sixth. He died at second, when Vaughn hit into a double play, Olson to Stovall. Lindsay, who was given a chance to play second for the Naps in the ninth inning, retired the last two men after Daniels had been thrown out by Gregg.

For five innings the Naps were helpless before the pitching of Vaughn and the fine support accorded him. In the third, Turner drew a pass and Fisher beat out a bunt to short, catching the big boy flat-footed. But Vaughn struck out Gregg, forced Butcher to ground to Chase, who made a fine stop, and fanned Olson. Hartzell, by two good stops and throws, and Cree, with a beautiful running catch, retired the Naps in the fifth. In the sixth, with two runs to overcome, the Naps woke up. Butcher, who had his first trial in the game, taking Graney's place in left, started the fun with a single to center. Olson duplicated the trick, after Butcher had stolen, and Jackson brought both home with a double along the third-base line. Jackson took third on the throw home and scored while Magner was throwing Stovall out at first. Then Birmingham beat out a hard bounder to Vaughn, stole second just before Ball drew a pass, and both came home when Turner doubled. Turner made a pretty steal of third, but was stranded there as Fisher and Gregg fanned.

In the seventh, with one out, Olson drew a base on balls. Jackson lashed a hit to center that Daniels was slow in reaching, and Olson came all the way home, Jackson going to second on the throw home. Stovall, however, ended the Naps' chances when he hit to Hartzell, who touched Jackson coming in and got Stovall at first. In the eighth, though both Ball and Turner singled, with one down, Fisher and Gregg failed to hit the ball out of the diamond and the scoring was over.

BOSTON PLAYERS QUIT.

Herzog and Miller, Tired of Tenney's Management, Will Leave Rustlers.

BOSTON, July 16.—Charles Herzog and "Doc" Miller, shortstop and right field, respectively, of the Boston National Baseball Club have notified the officials of the club that they are through with baseball. Dissatisfaction with the team management is the reason given by each.

Miller alleges that he has not received a promised increase of salary, while Herzog complains that he was fined $300, or fifteen days' pay, for indifferent ball playing in New York a short time ago. He says that the fine was to be remitted if he played better ball, but although he has done his best, nothing has been said about repayment of the fine.

Miller says he is going West to practice medicine, while Herzog says he will go back to Ridgley, Md., where he has a farm.

Baltimore Defeats Newark in Errorless Ten-Inning Game.

In an interesting and errorless game at Newark yesterday the Baltimores shut out the Newarks after a ten innings by a score of 1 to 0.

The Orioles won the game in the tenth, after two were out, on Parent's dobule and Roth's single. In the eighth inning, with two men on base and two out, Lee purposely passed Corcoran to take a chance on Schmidt. Schmidt pasted the first ball pitched to deep right centre that looked good for at least three bases. Bailey made after it, and, after a long run, pulled the ball down, saving the game at that stage. J. DOLAN CAPTURES TWO DISTANCE RUNS Pastime A. C. Runner Leads Athletes in Club Games—Sheppard Makes Slow Time.

Members of the Pastime Athletic Club held their monthly games yesterday at the Club's oval, Ninetieth Street and Avenue A, and, with several events open to outside athletes, the competitions were productive of some good sport.

Eight events were on the card, including field and track. The feature was the half-mile handicap, which was captured by J. Dolan of the club who went after the track record of 2:01¼, but, although he won the event, he failed to equal the old mark. Dolan's time was 2:02 1-5.

Ten starters faced the mark with liberal handicaps and led Dolan at a fast clip for more than three-quarters of the journey. On rounding the turn on the last lap Doland worked up from third place, from which place he had trailed the leaders from the start and with a burst of speed passed the other contestants and led the way to the tape, winning by about two yards, with his brother, T. Dolan, who started from the 5-yard mark, second. Miles McHugh, with a 17-yard start, was third, about a yard behind the second Dolan.

J. Dolan also showed the way home in the 600-yard run, which was open to other athletes, and two contenders were on the mark with the Pastime crack. By timing his run Dolan, after trailing the field in fourth place until the final 100 yards, opened up a sprint and breasted the tape with a comfortable margin, Mike McLoughlin of the Knights of St. Anthony finished second, and R. Ogg, the cross-country runner of the Mohawk Athletic Club, finished third.

Melvin W. Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic Club was on hand to give an exhibition mile, but after starting encountered some trouble with his shoes and decided to cut the distance in half. Sheppard ran unpaced and showed plenty of speed in the first lap, but slowed up after announcing his intention of only running the half and finished the distance in 2:10.

Jim Duncan, the discus champion of the Mohawk Athletic Club, captured the scratch discus throw, and, although he was in fine trim, was not forced to extend himself in order to win. Duncan hurled the platter a distance of 133 feet 7 inches, completely outdistancing his opponents, as E. P. Hines of the home club, the second man, was far behind the Mohawk athlete, with a throw of 119 feet 4½ inches. Platt Adams of the New York Athletic Club was among the contestants in the event, but was unable to secure a place.

First and second places in the standing hop, step and jump scratch were captured by the Adams brothers, Platt and Ben, the former, who makes the event a specialty, was first, with 28 feet 6¼ inches. Ben Adams got second, with a distance of 28 feet 4 inches.

The 300-yard run resulted in a close race from the start and only a yard separated G. Wagner, the winner, from the second man, and a like distance divided second and third. The summaries:

300-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by G. Wagner, (20 yards;) H. Seney, (10 yards,) second; M. McHugh, (10 yards,) third. Time, 0:33 1-5.

600-Yard Run, Scratch, Open.—Won by J. Dolan, Pastime A. C.; M. McLoughlin, Knights of St. Anthony, second; R. Ogg, Mohawk A. C., third. Time, 1:16 2-5.

CINCINNATI REDS WIN.

League Team Beats Long Branch Players at Hollywood by 8 Runs to 4.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, July 16.—The Hollywood Horse Show grounds presented a gala appearance this afternoon in anticipation of the baseball game between the Cincinnati Reds and the Long Branch team, which was won by the former by 8 to 4. Hundreds of automobiles were parked within the inclosure, and the stand was filled from the Summer colonies from all along the Rumson Road, Deal, Allenhurst, and adjacent places.

Handsomely gowned women vied with their escorts in rooting for their choices, and baseball at this Summer resort was put on a decidedly high plane through the excellence of the contest at all times.

Cincinnati jumped into the van in the first inning, when Bescher scored after two hits had been made. In the second the Reds had a batting session, and tallied three more runs with Balenti, Esmond, and Severand. It was not until the third that the home team got a man home, Patrick tripling and going past the plate on Bertwistle's single to right field.

The Reds made their position doubly secure in the fourth by piling up two more runs. Both teams were blanked in the next three innings and Cincinnati made their total eight in the eighth inning, when Almeida hit to centre and subsequently scored, after which Balenti went home on Severoid's triple.

The home team came to life in the last inning, and soon had the bases full, Daly made the first run, and Hall and Lee tallied on Patrick's three-bagger. The latter was caught trying to steal home, and hostilities ended. The teams and score:

Cincinnati—Griffith, first base; Bescher, left field; Bates, centre field; Marsans, right field; Almeida, third base; Balenti, short stop; Esmond, second base; Severoid, catcher; Juel, pitcher.

FINEGAN SCORES TWICE.

Former Junior Champion Star of Knights of St. Anthony Games.

Fred Finegan of the Knights of St. Anthony, who captured the junior National title for the hop, step, and jump at New Orleans last year, proved the best all-around performer yesterday in the members' games of his club, which were held at American Oval, Greenpoint. Finegan showed to advantage in both field and track competitions and carried off the premier honors in the furlong dash and the eight-pound shot from the scratch mark.

The "220" was the best event of the games, and three places were secured by scratch men. Finegan, however, showed the most speed when the sprint was started, and had matters his own way, winning handily. The shot put was just as easy a victory for Finegan, who allowed the other two contestants of the event marks of five feet. Finegan's put from scratch was 49 feet 5 inches.

R. Hutchinson, a member of the club whom Referee W. L. Jones disqualified on the relay team of O'Neill-Adams at the Millrose games on Saturday at Celtic Park, captured the 100-yard dash, with a handicap of 4½ yards. The summaries:

FOUR NEW CLUB RECORDS.

Good Performances Marked Sheridan A. C. Semi-Monthly Games.

The semi-monthly games of the Sheridan Athletic Club were held yesterday at the Brooklyn Public Schools Athletic League field and furnished good competition. Excellent performances were recorded in most of the events. As a result of the games four new club records were established by the club's athletes. The best individual performers were D. Politzer and H. Browser in the running events and L. Bernstein, who jumped in good form. The record breaking started early, when D. Politzer, in the sixty-yard dash, broke the tape a winner in 6 3-5 seconds. Politzer kept up his performances by winning the 220 in 24 1-5 seconds, lowering the former club record by three-fifths of a second.

The biggest surprise of the meet was the performance of H. Browser, a newcomer, in the mile run. Browser was allotted 140 yards handicap, and romped home a winner in easy style, being timed in 4:39.

In the hop, step, and jump L. Bernstein, after an absence from active competition of almost nine months, jumped 42 feet 1 inch, securing first place in the event and the new record. The summaries:

60-yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by D. Politzer, (scratch;) R. Von Hagen, (2 feet,) second; M. Warschofsky, (11 feet,) third. Time—0:06 3-5.

J. Mooney and J. P. Hynes of the Ozanam Club tied for first place in the point honors yesterday in the members' games at De Witt Clinton Park, each scoring a total of 11 points. In the absence of A. Ahlgren, the crack miler of the club, Maurice Hughes was placed on the scratch mark of the mile run, but was defeated by J. Mooney, who started with a mark of 125 yards. In the quarter-mile run Hynes started from scratch, and had little trouble in showing the way to the tape by a comfortable margin. The summaries:

NINE YACHTS JOIN LARCHMONT FLEET

Knockabout Division of Gravesend Bay Makes First Run to Long Island Sound.

After one of the most interesting and novel yacht races of the season the big squadron off the Larchmont Yacht Club was joined yesterday by nine more craft. With one exception the boats were from the knockabout division of Gravesend Bay. To reach the hospitable Sound organization they covered a course that seldom is sailed by racing craft.

Starting from off Governors Island at 7:10 yesterday morning the little yachts threaded their way through the East River, Hell Gate, and Long Island Sound in a breeze that never was strong enough to even be called a fair sailing wind. The winner was Merry Widow, the property of Bailey, Dillenbach, and Bailey, Atlantic Yacht Club. The boat covered the course in 6:44:40. To the surprise of all only forty seconds separated Merry Widow from Bambino, the second yacht to finish.

Fluky winds made the contest unusually interesting to a large delegation from the Bensonhurst Yacht Club, which followed the contest in the regatta boat. The air was light and from the southeast when the craft started. First one and then another boat had the advantage until by the time Stepping Stone was reached each boat had been in the lead.

Here head winds were encountered after the craft had been hung up by a dead calm. In the end it was a reach to the finish line between Carola, the flagship of Commodore Richards, Larchmont Yacht Club, and Sumida, the flagship of Rear Commodore Wilson, Atlantic Yacht Club. The summary:

CLASSIC LEADS FLEET.

Three Motor Boats Finish in Race to Marblehead.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 16.—The power boat Classic, representing the Motor Boat Club of America, won the race from Huntington, L. I., to Marblehead early to-day on her time allowance. Her elapsed time was 33:31:00 and her corrected time 21:43:00. Frank Gheen's Kitsix was second and the Thistle of the Yonkers Yacht Club finished third. The Inevitable, flying also the colors of the Yonkers Club, did not finish. The time of the boats follows:

Yachts.	Finish.	Elapsed Time. H.M.S.	Corrected Time. H.M.S.
Classic	2:01 A. M.	33:31:00	21:43:00
Kitsix	7:53 P. M.	27:23:05	26:01:10
Thistle	9:29 P. M.	28:59:00	27:00:23

The motorboat Inevitable, owned by Alexander Johnson, one of the competing craft in the race, got only as far as Falkner's Island, off Guilford, Conn., in Long Island Sound, on the run to the Massachusetts city. She broke down at that point early Friday evening and went out of the race. Her owner secured a tow for her back to New Rochelle, where she was berthed.

Union Settlement A. C. Games.

The third set of monthly games of the Union Settlement A. C. were held yesterday at Thomas Jefferson Park. The feature event of the programme, the 600-yard novice, was captured by J. Conway. P. Lally won the two-mile handicap run from scratch, defeating J. J. Lawless and H. Oppenheim, who were on the scratch and 100-yard marks, respectively. The two scratch men fought a nip and tuck battle in the last quarter, but Lally was the strongest and won by a safe margin. The summaries:

440-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by T. Kennedy, (15 yards;) J. Farrell, (5 yards,) second; T. Wynn, (scratch,) third. Time—0:54 3-5.

600-Yard Run, Novice.—Won by J. Conway; H. Oppenheim, second; E. Finn and J. Gilday tied for third place. Time—1:23.

Two-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by P. Lally, (scratch;) J. J. Lawless, (scratch,) second; H. Oppenheim, (100 yards,) third. Time—10:50 2-5.

Putting 12-Pound Shot, Handicap.—Won by T. Morrissey, (scratch,) with a put of 40 feet 11 inches; I. Rich, (6 feet,) with a put of 32 feet 6 inches, second; T. Walsh, (scratch,) with a put of 36 feet 10¼ inches, third.

Canadian Cricketers Arrive.

An aggregation of the best cricket players of Canada arrived in this city yesterday from Toronto to play a series of matches here during this week. The first match will be played to-day against the Bensonhurst Cricket Club. On Tuesday they will meet the Crescent Athletic Club eleven. On Thursday there will be a match with the New York and New Jersey Cricket Association at the Staten Island Athletic Club, Livingston, S. I. On Friday the Toronto players will meet an eleven from the New York Veteran Cricketers' Association at Manor Field, West New Brighton, S. I., and the week will end on Saturday with a match with the champion Staten Island Cricket Club eleven at Livingston, S. I. From this city the Toronto cricketers will go to Philadelphia for a two days' match with the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Economical Discipline.

"Clarence has been a bad boy this morning, dear," said Mrs. Titewood, "and I shall have to punish him."

"Don't whip him, Maria," put in Mr. Titewood. "The wear and tear on his clothes will be worth more than the value of his punishment."

"Then how shall I punish him? It must be done."

"Send him to bed without his supper. Thus we may combine discipline with economy. Have you no idea of saving?"

And thus the custom originated. Wait till the kids get a vote!—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

EASY FOR JOHNSON.

Champion Signs Articles to Fight Wells in London for $40,000.

LONDON, July 16.—Articles have been signed for a fight in London before Sept. 30 between Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells for the championship of the world and $40,000.

Most Englishmen consider that Wells will have small chance against the heavyweight champion.

THIS WEEK'S BOXING BOUTS.

Twentieth Century Will Stage Two Shows in One Week.

Although the week's boxing bouts arranged by the various local clubs do not bring together any champions or near champions the followers of the game will find plenty to occupy their attention during the week. The hot weather has had little effect on the game, and consequently all the managers have arranged their regular shows for their members.

The Twentieth Century Athletic Club, which holds forth at the St. Nicholas Rink, will inaugurate a new feature by staging two shows from now on during each week. The evenings set aside by the club are Tuesday and Friday. The club will commence with what appears to be the best contest of the week. "Porky" Flynn, who last week decisively defeated the English champion "Jewey" Smith, will be seen in the ring with Joe Jeanette.

Jeanette and Flynn were matched once before, but the colored heavyweight sustained an injury to his hand and was compelled to call off the match. While Jeanette is probably the cleverer of the two, the Bostonian is a big, strong, hard-hitting fighter, who can take any amount of punishment and keep on coming back for more.

On Friday night at the same club the managers have arranged an all-star card. Joe Thomas of California and Ted Nelson, the welterweight champion of Australia, will furnish the fireworks in the main bout of ten rounds. Another contest of equally good men will be the semi-final, which will bring together Willie Howard of Brooklyn and Fighting Joe Hyland. The regular preliminaries will precede the two closing numbers.

At the National Sporting Club next Thursday night the main attraction will be between two Philadelphia lightweights, Young Nitchie and Frank Loughrey, a brother of the famous Young Loughrey. The bout will attract much attention from the local following and interest many of the New York lightweights. Each boy is fast and willing to mix matters at all times, and with a big following the contest should prove one of the best drawing cards the National has had in some time. On July 27 Joe Thompson and Willie Lewis will furnish the windup.

The card arranged for Brown's Gymnasium will be held to-morrow night, and should prove one worth going a long distance to see. Andy Morris of Boston and Jim Savage have been matched a second time. In the last meeting between these men Morris won, and while the bout lasted it was one of the fastest and hottest seen about here in some time, Savage having all the best of the work until the knockout was scored.

The weekly stag of the Long Acre Athletic Club on Wednesday night promises to be the best that Manager Neuman has carded in some time. Dick Howell, the Canadian middleweight, will face Jimmy Mitchen of Brooklyn in the final of ten rounds. These boxers met once before and put up such a slashing bout that they have been secured for a second exhibition.

The Brighton Beach Athletic Club of Coney Island will stage its regular programme on Thursday night at the old Johnstown Flood Building, Coney Island. The Fairmont Athletic Club will offer the patrons the usual all-star card on Saturday night.

SIWANOY TENNIS TOURNEY.

Mann of Yale Meets with Defeat in the Third Round.

P. F. Mann of Yale met defeat in the third round of the Siwanoy Cup singles yesterday in the tournament in progress on the courts of the Siwanoy Country Club of Mount Vernon. The Yale player was defeated by F. A. Fall after three grueling sets at 6–4, 4–6, 9–7. Mann was four times within a stroke of winning the match in the third set. Cedric A. Major, the former interscholastic champion, disposed of E. R. Coughlan of the local club in straight sets by the score of 6–2, 6–2.

The beginning of the doubles produced a three-set volleying match, in which E. M. Lord and E. W. Breck defeated George Clark and A. H. Ham at 5–7, 6–3, 6–2. The summary follows:

Siwanoy Men's Cup Singles.—First Round—Cedric A. Major defeated E. R. Coughlan, 6–2, 6–2.

Second Round—C. W. Breck defeated William Menkel, 6–2, 6–1.

Third Round—C. W. Breck defeated S. T. Breck, 3–6, 6–3, 6–4; A. E. Buichard defeated Harry Parker, 6–4, 6–3; F. A. Fall defeated P. F. Mann, 6–4, 4–6, 9–7.

Men's Doubles.—First Round—H. L. Ghormley and P. F. Mann defeated R. F. Zogbaum and S. L. Holbrook, 6–1, 6–3; E. R. Coughlan and S. T. Breck defeated A. K. Taylor and partner, by default; E. C. Lord and E. W. Breck defeated George Clark and A. H. Ham, 5–7, 6–3, 6–2.

Second Round—E. R. Coughlan and S. T. Breck defeated E. M. Lord and E. W. Breck, 6–4, 6–3.

Rufus Davis, the Chairman of the Lawn Tennis Committee of the New York Athletic Club, together with Lewis H. Freedman and Frank B. Roundey of the committee have perfected all arrangements for the deciding of the championship tournament of the Westchester County Association on the new clay courts at Travers Island, beginning Saturday, July 22. The five events will draw upon the leading players of all of the Westchester clubs: Miss Adelaide Browning of Ardsley, recent winner at Dunwoodie; Miss Anna Martin of Park Hill, Mrs. Henry H. Burdick of Bronxville, and others of the foremost women will compete in the women's singles, doubles, and mixed doubles.

The men's singles and doubles will bring out such men as Hugh Tallant from the Amackassin Club, Alfred H. Hammett of the Manor Club, Morris S. Clark of Bronxville, and others.

Matches in the handicap singles and doubles lawn tennis tournament of the Staten Island Tennis Club will begin to-day on the courts at Livingston, Staten Island. The committee in charge of the tournament includes G. H. Ledgard, Chairman; W. De Bost, and W. A. Ross, Jr.

Ball Player Runs Into Bonfire.

Phelix Fox, 18 years old, a clerk of 85 Sixth Avenue, was playing baseball at Happy Land, South Beach, S. I., yesterday and was running to catch a fly when he stepped into a bonfire. His feet were badly burned and he had to be taken to the S. R. Smith Infirmary at New Brighton for treatment.

SHOOTS TWO IN A SALOON.

Slayer Says One Who Died Had Broken Up His Home.

A throng of Italians were celebrating the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel in the back room of a saloon at 415 East 106th Street yesterday evening, when one of the men rose and began firing his revolver at a crowd around a table. Two men fell and before he could fire again Congelo Laparola, the bartender, grabbed his pistol.

Detectives Fallon and Kahn heard the reports from the street and ran into the saloon. Dr. Smith took the wounded men to the Reception Hospital, where one of them, Alesandro Zarro of 2,089 First Avenue, who had been shot behind the right ear, died soon after his arrival. The other, Filipo Prosapro of 2,041 First Avenue, who is shot in the left temple, is dying.

The man who did the shooting said he was Giuseppi Romenello of 226 East Fifty-ninth Street. He told the police that Zarro had tried to break up his home.

RAISING OCEAN RATES.

The Atlantic steamship pool will raise rates for first and second cabin passengers $2.50 beginning to-day. This is a certainty, and there is a prospect that freight rates will be raised by some amount not yet stated. The sequel to the recent seamen's strike is the same as in the case of our anthracite strike. The increased costs are unloaded upon the ultimate consumer, and he, poor man, cannot pass the burden along.

There is an amusing impudence about the action of this pool. It is under prosecution as a combination in restraint of trade in this country, but sitting in London it displays an ingenuous complacency worthy of the worst of our malefactors of large business. Why do not these wicked men tremble at the name of WICKERSHAM? Can it be that they never heard of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, whose functions extend to combinations in restraint of foreign trade? And is it possible that the Commission will calmly endure this pulling of its official beard? Shall the railway pool be forbidden to raise rates, and the steamship pool be allowed to raise them? There are reams of beautiful copy in prospect, and there is not a lawyer earning $50,000 a year who is not delighted at the outlook. As for the ultimate consumer, all he can do is to vote about it, and he is bothered. He perceives, of course, that he voted wrong twenty years ago, and he is wondering what he will think twenty years from now of his next vote, however he casts it.

THE REMSEN BOARD.

When Attorney General WICKERSHAM declared that Dr. WILEY and Dr. RUSBY "merited condign punishment" for evading Solicitor MCCABE's ruling, that Dr. RUSBY should receive no more than $9 a day for discharging the duties of two separate offices in the Bureau of Chemistry, he forgot his own glaring evasion of the act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated, misbranded, and deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, in his decision of April 14, 1909, respecting the legality of the appointment of five scientific consulting experts, known popularly as the Remsen Referee Board. This board was created on Feb. 20, 1908, for the specific purpose of overruling the findings of Dr. WILEY of the Bureau of Chemistry with respect to the purity of foods and drugs, which it was his duty to present as prescribed in Section 4 of the Food and Drugs act:

> That examinations of specimens of foods and drugs shall be made in the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, or under the direction and supervision of such Bureau, for the purpose of determining from such examinations whether such articles are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act; and, if it shall appear from such examination that any of such specimens is adulterated, or misbranded, within the meaning of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause notice thereof to be given to the party from whom such sample was obtained.

By the findings of Dr. WILEY's bureau, and by them alone, the Secretary of Agriculture was to be guided in bringing court proceedings against suspected poisoners and misbranders. But the poisoners and misbranders had seen this provision in the bill before it became an act. They feared it, and they feared Dr. WILEY. Their lobbyists appeared at Washington and induced a Senator to frame an amendment providing for the appointment of a referee board of consulting scientific experts, to whom the Secretary of Agriculture might appeal from the reports of Dr. WILEY's bureau. Senator HEYBURN, the introducer of the Pure Food and Drugs bill, testified in the Senate Chamber on Jan. 25, 1909, that, in the Conference Committee of the Senate and House, this amendment was specifically and pointedly excluded from the act. The conferrees feared that, if the board were created, narrow questions might be propounded to it upon which broad rulings would be based to circumvent the intent of Congress. Instead they provided for appeals to the courts, where the facts might be considered in each case in all their bearings.

But when Chief WILEY reported that benzoic acid, used as a preservative and mixed in the diet of children, invalids, the aged, and persons in all conditions of health, would have untoward effects, and that only by the use of this chemical the refuse of the canning and preserving factories—skins, cores, stems, and surplus juice, green, moldy, rotten, broken, and generally unusable vegetables—could be made profitably merchantable, the rage of the foisters of these foods upon the public knew no bounds. Their fury broke through the offices of the Department of Agriculture and beat upon the doors of the White House. The most powerful influences were brought to bear in persuading President ROOSEVELT that Chief Chemist WILEY's report might be in error. The President yielded. Ignoring the court provision, Secretary WILSON appointed the board which Congress had expressly refused to constitute, finding his authority in this language of the Appropriation act of 1908:

> Employing such assistants, clerks, and other persons as the Secretary of Agriculture may consider necessary for the purposes named.

Lord TENTERDEN's rule classes "other" persons or things with the immediate company they keep in a statute, and, according to this principle of legal interpretation, Secretary WILSON's power of employing "assistants, clerks, and other persons" could not be construed as authorizing him to create a superior board of appeal, consisting of such men as President IRA REMSEN of Johns Hopkins, and Director RUSSELL H. CHITTENDEN of Yale Sheffield Scientific School. Yet Attorney General WICKERSHAM, ignoring the legal provisions of the Pure Food and Drugs act empowering the Bureau of Chemistry in this matter, had the hardihood to say in his decision:

> The Secretary would naturally desire to reach a right conclusion as to such matters [i. e., adulterated, misbranded, poisonous, and deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors] and not subject the owners of articles affected by the ruling to litigation if any error should have been committed by the Bureau; and Congress would seem to have had that in mind in providing in the lump sum appropriations of 1907 and 1908 for the employment of "such assistants, clerks, and other persons as the Secretary of Agriculture may consider necessary for the purposes named."

Thus the eminent board was appointed and paid in defiance of the Pure Food act and of Congress. What the Conference Committee had feared then came to pass. The Remsen Board was not asked whether, by the use of benzoic acid, offal might be prepared for introduction into the bakeshops, delicatessen stores, and restaurants of the Nation in the form of cheap jams, jellies, fruit pie fillings, pickles, and other "bulk" preserves. It was not asked whether children, the aged, the sick, and persons in varying degrees of ill-health could withstand in their daily diet the cumulative effects of this preservative. It was not asked whether every article of food which had been commonly preserved by means of benzoic acid or sodium benzoate could not be preserved and offered to the consumer in perfect condition without the aid of any chemical preservative whatever. Nor was the board asked whether large doses of this chemical were not customarily used by the manufacturers. None of these vital questions was propounded to the eminent Referee Board of Consulting Chemists. The questions put, upon which, later, Secretary WILSON's broad administrative ruling was based, were answered by a verdict that minute daily doses of sodium benzoate were not found to be deleterious when fed to young men in vigorous health during a period of three months.

Secretary WILSON knew, as Chairman REMSEN pointed out in his speech before the Convention of State and National Food and Dairy Departments at Denver on Aug. 27, 1909, "that the Referee Board was to take up only such questions as were referred to it by the Secretary." Upon its narrow findings in reply to a question which omitted consideration of the vital facts, Secretary WILSON, aided and abetted by Attorney General WICKERSHAM, undertook the dangerous responsibility of permitting to be reintroduced into the markets of this country medicated garbage which the civilized nations of Europe had long excluded from their manufactures and importations.

The House Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture, it is announced, desires to know why Mr. WICKERSHAM exceeded the province of a purely legal adviser in recommending that Dr. WILEY and his coadjutors, engaged in protecting the people against adulterators and poisoners, be put out of office. Other things will be inquired into. Among them will be the circumstances leading to the creation of the Remsen Board, and the purposes to which its services were put.

UNCLE SAM'S DIRECT PRIMARY.

We have for some time been of the opinion that the direct primary idea was running mad in the States. It has gone stark, staring crazy in the bill introduced by Senator BRISTOW of Kansas, covering fifty-five printed pages, and summoning the voters of the Nation's capital to decide, at a primary to be held next Spring, who will be their party choice for Chief Executive of the United States. It is not for the District of Columbia especially that Senator BRISTOW fathers this bill. He trusts in the "probability that it will serve as a model to be copied by the States." He would then do away with the farce of electing delegates to represent the wishes of the people in the nomination of a Presidential candidate at the quadrennial Republican and Democratic Conventions!

Are there not thousands of men in each Congressional district, Senator BRISTOW asks, whose opinions as to the wisdom of the selection of a candidate are at least as good as the opinion of a National party delegate? The five States of Oregon, North Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and New Jersey are convinced that there are. They have already decided upon a direct ballot by the people not to dispense with delegations to the party conventions, but to bind them by ironclad instructions as to what precise stick of Presidential timber they should select and adhere to.

Even with delegations as free and independent as they now are, the process of uniting upon a candidate acceptable to the majority is made difficult by the introduction of "favorite sons," the offspring of local and provincial pride. But consider bodies of delegates from forty-six States, each instructed to favor a local son against all his rivals! Senator BRISTOW says he has introduced his bill because the elections of National delegates "are a farce and arouse absolutely no interest among the citizens." He hopes his bulky bill will be adopted by all the States. Is there some virtue in its voluminous pages that will enlist the eager interest which, he complains, is now lacking in the people's choice of delegates who make Presidential nominations?

NEBRASKA DONE WITH BRYAN.

Anti-Bryan sentiment among Nebraska Democrats is not exactly new, but when the Douglas County Convention, inspired by Mr. DAHLMAN, who has been the perpetual candidate's chief supporter in Omaha for twenty years, "deplores and condemns" him for turning treacherously upon his party in the hour of need, it looks as if the tail had taken seriously to wagging the dog. The Democrats were successful in Nebraska in the last election, in spite of BRYAN's bolt. Nevertheless, the country has felt that Democracy in Nebraska meant Bryanism. But the Omaha Convention has now named HARMON for the Presidential candidate in 1912, and when the State Convention meets in Fremont July 25 Mr. BRYAN will be lecturing in Kansas. He cannot do very much for his party in Kansas.

Nebraska Democrats are confident of success at the polls in November without BRYAN's help. This is particularly gratifying, as BRYAN has been more than commonly active lately throughout the country. He has been meddling at Albany, and has tried to meddle in Washington. The severe denunciation of the man and his political methods in his own State strengthens the hope that his influence will not be felt in 1912 as it was unquestionably felt, to the detriment of the Democratic Party, in 1904. Nebraska shows that it has a well-organized and earnest Democratic Party which discards BRYAN's leadership and rejects his theories. The effect ought to be wholesome in other States.

HOW NOT TO REVISE THE TARIFF.

The collapse of the obstruction to the Canadian reciprocity arrangement attests the sad conviction of the obstructionists that the more they talked the more harm they did to themselves. The various votes showed a waning strength. The defeat of the farmers' relief proposals, the free meat proposal, and all the rest signifies little regarding their merits or their fate as independent proposals. The only significance either of the rejection of the amendments or of the passage of the main measure is that Congress perceives that the country approves reciprocity with Canada. President TAFT truly said that the measure would fail or succeed only according to its popular support. It was the people's measure as much as his, and he abided by their verdict regarding it. The country's response has been audible even to Senator LA FOLLETTE, whose procedure epitomizes everything which ought to be avoided in the larger question of the amendment of the tariff.

The Senator promises that the adoption of his woolen schedule would save the country $172,000,000 annually, his cotton schedule $169,000,000, and so on. The only suitable answer to be made is the reply a customer made to a seller of stoves. The seller argued that one stove would save 50 per cent. of coal, and the buyer said he would take two, and buy no coal. We have great hopes of benefit to the Nation through tariff reform, but the promises of the Senator are made somewhat too largely and irresponsibly. If the Senator's figures were true nobody would need to work if he revised the tariff, but there would be no recourse if he were mistaken. The tariff which the country wants is a tariff written for the country, and not a tariff written either for consumers or producers alone. There is no reason to suppose that Senator LA FOLLETTE has either the information or the temperament to write any schedule of such a tariff. Certainly his speech gave no sign of any qualification for leadership or National confidence. His promises were simply promises, there being no authority for any of his calculations, either of revenue to the Government or of economy to the consumer. And, were his assertions true, there remains the prospect that the benefits to the consuming class might be bought too dearly. The country does want the tariff revised downward, but it wants the revision made in a manner which will command the country's confidence as completely as the Canadian proposal does. In that case there will be neither political nor economic "flarebacks." There will be neither recriminations of perfidy and dishonor nor of ruin of the country's industries.

The Democrats are in power in the House because the Republicans failed to act on the mandate to revise the tariff downward. The country, accordingly, looks to the Democrats to take the initiative. The proposal of Senator LA FOLLETTE, a Republican, to reduce the wool schedule more than the Democrats are willing to reduce it is plainly a political manoeuvre. No such proposal could pass the House without a Democratic confession of no confidence in themselves. The only motive for such a proposal from a Republican is to embarrass a Republican President.

Senator LA FOLLETTE's proposal gives the Democrats an excellent example of what to avoid. His vanity and shallowness and assumption of leadership give the Democrats a chance to display, in contrast, caution and hard sense and regard for popular criticism of whatever they propose. The Democrats can retain control of the revision of the tariff for many elections if they avoid premature and ill-considered action.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Pockets" in Air Are Impossible.

An assumption that there exist in the atmosphere certain "holes," or, as they are more often called, "pockets," serves as a convenient explanation of such accidents to aviators as the one that brought MARS to the ground with such disastrous consequences on Friday. This idea, if it did not originate with KIPLING, at least gained general acceptance from his story of "The Night Mail," in which it was skillfully exploited, and there is no doubt that in a way it provides an explanation for phenomena often observed by the passengers of balloons as well as of aeroplanes.

The way, however, is much such a way as that in which the old theory of miasms from swamps or newly turned ground explained malaria and justified the old fears of night air. We know now, of course, that night air is just as good as day air—which is fortunate, since at night we have no other—and we would also know, if we stopped to think, that the aerial ocean is far less likely to have holes, or pockets, in it than is the ocean of water, which doesn't have them, and couldn't. What both of these oceans do have are currents—motions of their particles in all directions under the influence of various differences of pressure—and as air is vastly more mobile than water, the effect of like influences on it is the production of greater and more complex motions.

The complexity of these movements is well shown by the erratic flight of a piece of paper thrown into the air from a high building. It is obviously subjected to almost as many downward as upward pressures, but there is not the slightest excuse for supposing that its falls are into "holes," which word would imply the presence in the air of spaces approaching more or less closely the condition of vacuity. All the effects of such a space, so far as balloons and aeroplanes go, would follow a sudden passing from a horizontal, or ascending, current to one moving downward. This would require an instant readjustment of the supporting and propulsive forces at the aviator's command. Usually he can make it, but sometimes he cannot restore the equilibrium of his machine in time, and then he tumbles to the ground.

The birds doubtless have like experiences, but they are so much better equipped for meeting aerial emergencies that their flight is not measurably disturbed by the so-called pockets, and they never fall.

Two Views of Dr. Wiley.

We took occasion, several weeks ago, to comment with some severity on an impudent communication that had reached us from one F. W. HOPPER, who signed as "Secretary of the Advertisers' Association." That body, he said, had $400,000,000 invested in the manufacture of foods and drugs, spent $100,000,000 a year for advertising, and the object of its existence was to get Dr. WILEY dismissed from the Bureau of Chemistry. He demanded newspaper assistance in the attainment of that noble object, and almost openly threatened any paper that didn't help with deprivation of any share in the $100,000,000.

It now seems that for some time past the postal authorities and agents of the Agricultural Department have been vainly hunting for Mr. HOPPER and his association. All they can find out about either is that for a while he had a lock box in the New York General Post Office, and that he obtained it by giving fictitious references—the names of people who, if they have any existence, are now undiscoverable.

From sources like that come most of the charges that Dr. WILEY is a malignant enemy of business—an accusation which Mr. HOPPER made with a vigor equaled only by the caution with which he refrained from telling whose business Dr. WILEY had attacked and why. A significantly different account of Dr. WILEY's character and activities is given by ALFRED H. BECKMANN, Secretary of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association—a man and an organization that can be found without the use of detectives.

"No one," says Mr. BECKMANN, "appreciates more sincerely than do the grocers the excellent work Dr. WILEY has done in the cause of pure food. His services have been of incalculable value to the people and to the trade alike, for the interests of the trade and of consumers in pure food are identical." That last statement is a large truth, well expressed. The only criticism to be made of it is that the existence of dishonest trade, with the interests of which those of consumers certainly are not identical, is ignored by Mr. BECKMANN. Possibly he does so for the same reason, and with the same justification, that grammarians have for saying that bad grammar is not grammar at all. It isn't, and the selling of adulterated and misbranded foods and drugs is not trade. It is larceny, grand or petty—when it isn't murder by quick poison or slow.

When Minds Fail to Function.

Those of our correspondents who are saying that railway accidents like that at Bridgeport could be prevented by having two engineers on the locomotives instead of one, forget that the fireman is an engineer in the making and far enough advanced in the process temporarily to replace his cab companion in case of the latter's sudden death or disablement. If anything could have been done by anybody, after the engineer of the Federal Express made his fatal mistake, whatever it was, presumably his fireman both could and would have done it as well as another engineer, and it would be hardly more practicable on a locomotive than on a ship to have two men of equal rank and authority. In either case the chances are that more danger could be made than prevented.

No satisfactory explanation why the two men who were on that engine failed so disastrously has been offered. That they were "careless" in any ordinary sense of that word is almost impossible, for none knew better than they that the results of carelessness would fall first on themselves, and that whoever else escaped they would not.

Underlying the accident, doubtless, was one of those curious breaks in, or suspensions of, intelligence that mark the operations of every human mind. Completely to guard against their effects in any phase of human activity is impossible, but the possibility of guarding against some of them was well illustrated last week when the motorman of a Subway train fell from his car, and by that very act brought the train to a standstill. Had it not been for the device that set the brakes the instant his hand left the controlling lever there would almost certainly have been a collision, with a score and perhaps a hundred deaths.

NIGHT REMOVAL OF GARBAGE.

How It Affects Sleepers in the City's Most Crowded District.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I do not for one moment doubt that in instituting the system of night removal of garbage by the city, Commissioner Edwards and Mayor Gaynor had only the interest of the community at heart. In fact, for the greater part of the city, the system has proven a Godsend, and the citizens are thankful. Yet there is one section of the city, a poor and squalid section, where the removal of garbage at night is causing untold misery and suffering. I refer to the lower east side of Manhattan.

The new plan requires that garbage cans be placed before houses at night, awaiting the arrival of the Department of Street Cleaning cart. The people of the lower east side, numbering thousands to the block, with hundreds of infants, have one breathing spot—the street. It is true there are parks, recreation piers, roof gardens, and playgrounds for the children, but there are not enough. The ghetto is a world in itself. The few parks that it boasts are no more than oases in a desert of bricks. The majority of the residents seek relief from the torture and suffocation of their apartments (a refined name for a veritable hell) in the streets. Mothers who have been toiling throughout the day, with suckling babies at their breasts, and others scarce older tugging at their skirts, rush to the streets at night, first to sit and then to sleep. Take a stroll through one of the crowded east side streets—Orchard Street or Ludlow will do—at 10 o'clock some evening, and you will find a large share of the population on makeshift blankets or pillows, lying on the sidewalks, on stoops, and even on the asphalt pavement, seeking and gasping for air—and all around, like mocking demons emitting their murderous stench, stand the garbage cans. Here a tiny baby, hardly human, still has the instinct to cover up its little nostrils, as if in mortal dread that the foul air was making it the only target. But the babe has its mouth open, and the little innocent soul is already breathing in the germs of tuberculosis. There, an aged man, a relic of the past, bowed down by constant operation of a machine in a sweatshop, is slowly remounting the high stoop of the tenement in which he dwells. He has come down for air, but it was foul. He must return to his little box—'tis a shame to call it a room.

I have drawn this picture that the Mayor and his Commissioner might know and judge of the value of night removal in the city's most crowded section. And you, Mr. Editor, will you not enlist the interest and sympathies of your readers and help to overcome the prejudices of well-meaning but uninformed public officials?

Marriageable Sons and Daughters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am interested in "Pater's" query as to why mothers are solicitous for the marriage of their daughters, but not of their sons. It appears to me that the answer lies in the fact that even in this age a happy marriage is regarded as woman's noblest career; from her childhood on she is taught that when—not if—the right man comes along she will lay aside her books or music or travel and devote herself to home building. In consequence the girl of to-day looks upon marriage as a graceful exit from wage-earning; in her husband she expects to find a protector and provider, especially the latter. And what every woman knows is that, matrimonially speaking, a girl's greatest assets are beauty and youth; therefore the wise mother wants her daughters to "go while the going is good!"

But the brother is taught that after he has earned his way in the world he will then be in a better position to think about marriage; a successful bachelor of 50 may be very eligible; whereas a spinster of 50—! So the mother feels that her beloved son may better wait until he is firmly established in business before hampering himself with a family, for the hardest problem of to-day is that of earning a living. Very few mothers wish their boys to die unwed and childless, with no sons to perpetuate the name; but at the same time they think a poor young man may well postpone for a few years the incurring of liabilities he may not be able to meet.

Women Shoved Aside for Seats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There was a time when men riding in public vehicles in this country would blush to keep a seat while a woman was standing. This period passed into the time when men would keep seated under such circumstances, but hid their manly blushes behind a handy newspaper, and pretended not to see the woman. A further evolution of things, and a better one, made men and women take equal chances in getting a seat. If a man arrived first the seat was his; if a woman came in later she waited with equanimity her turn for a seat, and was better satisfied to do this than draw attention to herself and some overcourteous male passenger, who urged her to take his place, sometimes following up the courtesy with attentions that were not so welcome as the seat.

Alas! that we have not been able to keep the evolutionary wheel at a standstill when it reached this desirable equilibrium. It has rapidly been reversing its motion backward, till now it is at the beginning of things again. We are back where we were before such a stage of development as American chivalry became the recognized standard of public conduct of men toward women in this country. This is not because the American type has deteriorated, but because it has become obscured and crowded into the background by race types, whose attitude toward women was never on a much higher plane than that of the brute beast. Woman to them was never much more than a chattel, whether she was loaded down by jewels or rich clothes, or carried a pack on her back. Naturally men of these races will shove women aside as they are doing now in every public vehicle in this city, and seize by brute force the place of comfort or convenience within reach.

A Revised Nursery Rhyme.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A recent editorial article of yours entitled, "Tobacco Smoke," having for its main subject the incorporation of the "Non-Smokers' Protective League of America," is responsible for this attempted paraphrasing of a familiar rhyme:

Pease, torrid, hot,
Pease, horrid, cold,
Pease will nab you on the spot,
As a smoker bold.

Some like him not,
Some—it can't be told.
Some would gladly Peasey swat,

"ARTIFICIAL" ICE.

The Professor Caught Kissing His Housemaid Might Elucidate the Term.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Even during the recent torridity, instead of extending a grateful welcome to any term designating coolness, a correspondent of THE TIMES, whose irritation is perhaps aggravated by Newark mosquitos, expressed "surprise" at its allusion to "artificial" instead of manufactured ice.

It would seem that when scientific knowledge, aided by mechanical devices and selection of chemicals, converts water into ice, it calls the arts into requisition. Prof. D. S. Jacobus of the Stevens Institute of Technology, considered an expert in refrigerating processes, opens an encyclopaedic contribution as follows: "Ice Making—The production of artificial ice (so called to distinguish it from that produced by nature) by mechanical or chemical means." Perhaps THE TIMES may be astonished at the surprise of its correspondent.

In the biography of one of our lexicographers I think it is mentioned that on one occasion he met for the first time a remarkably pretty housemaid who was sweeping a hall in his home. He abstractedly encircled her waist and imprinted a studious kiss upon her unresisting cheek at the moment when his wife appeared in a doorway. "Oh, doctor," she exclaimed, "you surprise me!" "Nay, nay, Madam," he rejoined, "it is you who have surprised me. I have merely astonished you. I beg to refer you to Page 49 of my latest edition which bears on misapplication of words, with sincere hopes for your avoidance in the future."

COOLNESS UNDER ANY TERMS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The real misuse of "artificial" is in artificial flowers rather than in artificial ice. The following is the first and principal definition of the word in the Standard Dictionary:

"Artificial, a., 1. Produced or composed by art rather than by nature, but of the same materials, and with the same or nearly the same result; manufactured; distinguished from imitation; as, artificial rubies, (real rubies produced chemically;) artificial ice."

"Manufactured" ice is certainly not more correct nor less misleading, for if ice were actually "made by hand" it would be more likely to be the imitation than the real thing.

Mosquitos and Protective Coloring.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I do not believe that the theory of Emma F. that mosquitos light on dark clothing for protection is correct. The mosquito is raised in a gloomy home where nearly everything tends to form a dark color scheme, and as everything is more or less affected by its early surroundings the mosquito, while quite young, contracts a gloomy and revengeful spirit. This villain, like all others of his breed, likes to choose dark subjects and a dark night in which to do his work. Another theory is that the mosquito has weak eyes, that is to say he is shortsighted, and the reflection from the white clothing hurts his sight, and besides the white gives him the sensation of being cooler then darker clothing. He does not like that sensation, but prefers black, as it is warmer, and if the wearer be perspiring it reminds him of his "native heath." That a mosquito lights on dark clothing for protection is absurd, as we invariably slap as soon as we feel him and look for his remains afterward. How, then, does the dark clothing offer protection to the mosquito? That the mosquito does land on dark clothing is proved by the following incident: A military organization, of which I am a member, has its commissioned officers in dark uniforms and its "non-coms." and privates in light gray uniforms. This organization went on a "hike" one day, and at the end of the march it was found that the officers had practically three times as many mosquito bites as the men.

The best way, however, for Mr. Pearson to find out would be for him to dress himself in a dark suit and, taking a friend dressed in white, go for a walk in a swampy mosquito section at about 7:30 P. M. They should walk from two to three miles, and when they get back he will find out to his own satisfaction that mosquitos prefer dark clothing.

Advertisements of "Loan Sharks."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see THE TIMES continuing its onslaught on the horde of pests who have come to be known as "loan sharks." I believe THE NEW YORK TIMES was the first newspaper to discuss their nefarious proceedings, and the community of workers in this city owe you a debt of gratitude for your position in this matter.

THE NEW YORK TIMES does not insert the advertisements of "salary loan" usurers, and if such advertisements did not appear elsewhere the evil would be minimized. The means to do ill-deeds makes ill-deeds done.

Your remarks as to the intellectual superiority of municipal officials which should keep them from the power of the usurers are excellent in tone and purpose, but I beg to suggest that even men of sense and discretion may fall into financial trouble. There may be cases arising from "sheer reckless improvidence," but I can assure you that there are very many men whose resort to the unscrupulous money lender is the result of unforeseen circumstances.

I thank you, as others must thank you, for your condemnation of the criminals.

A PATRIOT'S RETREAT.

I quite admire the kind of man you know just where to find;
The simple-hearted citizen, whose calm,
untroubled mind
Leads him by contemplative ways; who gives renown no heed;
Whom I can put my finger on in any time of need;
That sort of man is Ezra Swett, whose name perchance belies
His tendency to toil; who hopes to gain
no earthly prize;
Yet if a crisis should arise, if patriots'
blood should spill,
I know I'd find him—fishing in the brook
down by the mill!

Serene, untroubled, calm he sits in his plain, rustic dress;
"What's one man's workin' in the world," says Ezra, "more er less?"
With all an angler's skill he hooks a worm from his tin can,
Six feet of him in jeans and straw and every inch a man;
Such souls preserve the Nation's poise—
firm as the granite rock
He sits while universes throb and helps absorb the shock;
And yet, if trumpets called for men, as
call sometimes they will,
I know I'd find him—fishing in the brook
down by the mill.

At dawn he rises with the lark, and if the day be fine
He's off before the wash is done and hung upon the line;
His wife, who does the wash for hire—a slavish soul—would stir
His soul from the untroubled ways of the philosopher;
But he, superior to her, bides in his studious calm,
His soul, set firm and granite-ribbed, unruffled
with a qualm:
"If you should want me any time—to eat or change a bill,"
He says, "you'll find me fishin' in th' brook down by th' mill."

Great stores of power bide in him, unwasted
Like Samson in his palmiest might, with
I've seen him stretch his brawny arms
above the bank and brook;
and bait another hook;
Immovable as Truth he sits, impregnable
and firm,
Desisting from his rest alone to cast another
worm;
And yet if drums beat loud alarms—if
Freedom's cause were ill,
I know I'd find him—fishing in the brook
down by the mill.

ANSWERS ATTACK ON HARTE TAX BILL

APPRAISALS NOT NECESSARY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You published this morning a lengthy criticism by Mr. Frank White on Mr. Harte's Senate bill, No. 1,577, for the amendment of Section 182 of the tax law, imposing a State franchise tax upon corporations, recommended by Gov. Dix.

As one who has been urging the passage of bills similar in effect to this one for a number of years, and having helped to prepare the pending measure, which I heartily favor, I desire to reply to some of Mr. White's arguments.

His first allegation is that this bill "will reduce the taxes upon prosperous and wealthy corporations," and he instances the change from the existing law, which now taxes a corporation paying 3 per cent. dividends exactly as much as one paying 6 per cent. dividends; and he gives, as a practical illustration, a corporation paying annually dividends of 3 per cent. and having its capital stock unimpaired, (that is, worth par,) and on which the proposed bill would reduce the tax.

There may be some exceptional cases in which a corporation may be considered to be prosperous and wealthy when it can only pay 3 per cent. dividends, but it seems to me that in the vast majority of cases a corporation which could only pay that amount would not long continue to be regarded as prosperous and be able to maintain and sell its stock at par.

Mr. White's second complaint is, that this change in the law would impose a heavier burden upon unsuccessful corporations, citing a case where a corporation whose unsuccessful business operations had reduced its assets to the point where they were worth only 25 per cent. of the par value of the capital stock, and saying that this would make them pay the same tax as a corporation which pays 3 per cent. dividends.

This statement of the effect of the proposed law is true, because it is intended to establish a minimum tax based upon the par value of capital stock for the privilege of exercising corporate franchises. The minimum tax proposed in the bill is only three-quarters of the tax imposed by New Jersey, and the New York law differs also from the New Jersey law in making an apportionment in accordance with the amount of business done in this State and not taxing the amount of capital stock employed in other States.

Mr. White's third argument is that the bill will not do away with the necessity for an appraisal because it will still be necessary to determine the amount of capital which is employed in other States. He errs, however, in calling this an appraisal, because it is merely an apportionment. The appraisal under the existing law requires a valuation to give the total worth of the property of the corporation. The apportionment which is required now and which will be continued under the new law is based upon gross assets employed in this State, as compared with those employed in business outside the State.

The proposed bill does away entirely with the present appraisal for all corporations, and while it does retain the need for an apportionment, this cannot be obviated under the scheme of the law. The intention of the bill is to do away, so far as possible, with the necessity for the exercise of judgment by the assessing official, and it accomplishes this purpose in 60 or 70 per cent. of the cases where such judgment is now required. After this is done it may, perhaps, be possible to devise a plan for doing away with the need for the exercise of judgment in the remaining 30 per cent. of cases.

This Section 182 of the Tax law as it now stands is a result of numerous amendments, all of which seem to have made it more complicated. The proposed bill will establish a simple and reasonable rule by imposing a minimum tax on the par value of issued stock and increasing this tax when dividends are declared amounting to 3 per cent. or more. The starting point is made at 3 per cent. in order to change the existing law as little as possible.

The amendment of 1906 was supposed to provide for a minimum tax on par value. But, chiefly because of an amendment to another section of the law in 1907, the Court of Appeals held in a 4-to-3 decision that the Legislature had not clearly expressed its intention. The majority of the court did not criticise the interpretation of the law made by the Controller's office and which this pending bill seeks to re-establish.

The minority of the court in an opinion by Justice Vann believed that the Legislature had sufficiently expressed its intention by the 1906 amendment. Speaking of the idea in that amendment which the proposed bill seeks to put in effect, Justice Vann said:

> Corporations, even if financially weak, are taxed for the privilege of doing business in this State, but at a lower rate and on a different basis from those which are financially strong. There is a minimum tax on all stock at its par value, but taxation is increased with prosperity, which is not unreasonable.

The argument for a low tax based upon appraised value mistakenly assumes that this franchise tax is a property tax, whereas it is an excise or privilege tax, and therefore the Legislature can properly use a different measure for taxation than the actual value of property owned.

If a corporation desires to issue $1,000,000 worth of capital stock, and thus hold itself out to the public as being worth a million, when it in fact only has $10,000 worth of assets, it is not unjust to require that it should pay a tax of $750 instead of paying $7.50. If it finds the high tax burdensome, its remedy is to reduce its capital stock so as to be somewhere near the actual value of its assets.

The strongest opposition to this tax at the committee hearings has come from the Interborough-Metropolitan interests, who have profited by the Court of Appeals decision which it is now sought to correct, and whose taxes will be somewhat increased by the proposed change in the law. Some other corporations, whose taxes will also be increased, have been fair enough to admit that the principle in the proposed bill is scientific and accurate, and are willing to accept the results of the change, even though their tax burden is increased.

When a tax law has become so involved and complicated that the burden it imposes is unequally distributed it is, of course, impracticable to change it without either increasing the burden upon some one or decreasing the revenue of the State. This State tax upon corporations is reasonable in amount, it can be collected easily and very cheaply, it will fall with certainty and with very little possibility of evasion when the changes proposed in this bill become effective. The interests of the State and of the 40,000 business corporations affected by the present intricate law should not be allowed to suffer because of the necessary shifting of the tax burden upon a few interests that must accompany such a change.

EDITH KANE TO WED GEORGE F. BAKER, JR.

Engagement Announced While Couple Were Cruising with a Party on His Yacht Viking.

GRENVILLE KANE'S DAUGHTER

Both Families Have Homes in Tuxedo Park—Young Baker Known Outside of Finance as a Daring Swimmer.

Announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Edith Brevoort Kane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Kane of Tuxedo Park, to George F. Baker, Jr., Vice President and Director of the First National Bank. Miss Kane and Mr. Baker have been cruising along the Sound for several days in his yacht, the Viking, with a party of young people and Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Jr., as chaperon. While on board the yacht Miss Kane and Mr. Baker wrote a number of notes to their friends, spreading the word of their engagement.

Both the Bakers and the Kanes have homes in Tuxedo Park. Mrs. Kane was Miss Margaret A. Wolfe. There are three younger daughters, Margaret Dorothy Kane, Anzonella Kane, and Rose O'N. Kane. Edith Brevoort Kane has been in society for several years. In December, 1907, she was reported engaged to Charles L. Lawrence, the son of the late Francis C. Lawrence, Jr., and the grandson of Charles Lanier, but the report was denied the next day by Mrs. Kane. Grenville Kane is a banker, with offices at 27 Pine Street.

George F. Baker, who is spending the Summer in Europe, was President of the First National Bank until he resigned in January, 1909, and was succeeded by Francis L. Hine. He is still the President of its Board of Directors. Mr. Baker is a close friend of J. Pierpont Morgan. They are neighbors, too, the Baker home being at 258 Madison Avenue. George F. Baker, Jr., has made that his New York home also, and he has played his part in the effort to reserve that part of New York for residential purposes, an effort that has long been championed by Mr. Morgan.

George F. Baker, Jr., is an enthusiastic yachtsman and a swimmer of ability. The Viking is not his first yacht, for three years ago he was sailing the Issaquena, which played a part in a little episode that did much to establish Mr. Baker's popular reputation as a swimmer.

Mr. Baker risked his life in the surf to keep a luncheon engagement with his sister, Mrs. William Goadby Loew, who was staying at the Seabright, N. J., residence of their father. He went down in the Issaquena and lay off Monmouth Beach. A stiff gale was blowing and a heavy sea thundered on the shore. The Issaquena dared go no further than 300 yards from the sands. The surf was unusually rough. No one had been allowed in bathing from that beach, and even the Captain of the lifesavers confessed that he would prefer to stay ashore.

A crowd of several hundred persons, noting the difficulty which beset the Issaquena's owner, gathered on the beach and watched. It was with considerable misgiving that they saw Mr. Baker order the lowering of the dinghy, and the excitement rose high as they watched him and two of his crew pull away from the yacht. It took all the skill and strength of the three to pass in safety to a point within fifty yards of the sands, and the crowd drew a breath of relief when the boat turned around toward the yacht as if to abandon the effort.

Then they saw Mr. Baker dive over the stern. He was fully clothed for the street. Slowly he made headway, the crowd shouting directions and ready to rush forward as soon as he landed. He was almost exhausted when he touched bottom and gained the beach. From a bathing house that belonged to his father's cottage he sent for dry clothing, and a little later he kept his engagement, none the worse for his wetting.

Tailors to the Rich on Strike.

The members of the Journeymen Tailors' Union employed by Charles F. Wetzel of 2 East Forty-fourth Street have gone on strike against proposed new methods of work, which, the officers of the union hold, would ultimately result in the lowering of wages. It was said that the strike was preceded by the discharge of several old employes. About 150 men quit. Brais, international Secretary of the union, will have a conference with representatives of the firm this forenoon.

CLERK IN REED-EAMES SUIT.

Cash Shortage at Army Post Which Occasioned It Laid to Him.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 16.—Through statements made by persons at the army post near this city to-day it was learned that the investigation of the accounts of the post exchange, of which Lieut. Reed is in charge and out of which grew his slander suit against the wife of Capt. Eames, were in charge of a clerk named Hull, that the shortage was $600, that the investigation followed a report by Lieut. Reed, who suspected irregularities, that Hull was said to have confessed to taking the money, and that he refunded $300 to the post exchange.

Prosecution at the time was contemplated, but the $300 was accepted from Hull and he was allowed to go.

These matters, it is said, are all on record at the army post, and are declared to disprove completely the charge of Mrs. Eames that Lieut. Reed was responsible for the irregularities.

It also developed to-day that Capt. and Mrs. Eames were on the eve of leaving the city when the summons in the slander suit was served, and their departure was temporarily stayed. Capt. Eames received leave of absence for three months and was to start East yesterday.

The women at the army post who were present when Mrs. Eames made the statement on which the suit is based will be summoned as witnesses by Lieut. Reed.

THREATENED POLICE CHIEF.

Officer's Baby Cried and Annoyed Miss Barrymore at Theatre.

Special to The New York Times.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 16.—Ethel Barrymore, through her manager, tried to oust Chief of Police Ahern from the Clunie Theatre in the course of a performance there last night. Miss Barrymore was annoyed by the crying of Chief Ahern's baby in the audience, and delivered an ultimatum between the acts that she would not appear until the child was removed.

Her manager went into the audience and delivered this ultimatum to the father of the child. Ahern declined to take the infant out of the theatre on the ground that it had ceased crying and would cause no further disturbance. The manager ordered the child taken out any way, threatening to call in a policeman and remove it. Chief Ahern told him to go ahead.

Miss Barrymore's manager had started to get the officer, when the house manage told him who the man he was trying to oust was. He was puzzled over what to do next, when Ahern emerged, having decided to leave with his child rather than have further scenes.

PAY BUT NO WORK FOR TEMPLE PASTOR

The Rev. John Wesley Hill and One Associate Not Agreed on Socialism.

THIS MAY EXPLAIN BREACH

Supplanted Preacher Says It's a Long Story and not Creditable to Church—Refers Inquirers to J. M. Cornell.

The recent appointment of the Rev. Du Bois H. Loux as associate pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, at Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, while the Rev. H. P. Sloan held a similar appointment, was the first revelation that there were dissensions in that church. It became known yesterday that Mr. Sloan, although the officials of the church had refused to let him undertake the work, was still drawing his salary. He said yesterday that he could not speak of the causes that led up to the present situation. It was a long story, he declared, and one not creditable to the church.

"Nothing can be made public in regard to my relations with the Metropolitan Temple unless Mr. John M. Cornell of the Board of Trustees of the church chooses to tell the story," said Mr. Sloan last night. "Mr. Cornell has looked after my interests throughout the controversy. While I have never filled the position of associate pastor, my salary has been paid. My contract began on March 25, and I came to New York at that time expecting to begin my work here. Then questions arose which I shall not discuss, with the result that I did not enter upon my duties at all."

The Metropolitan Temple is an independent church, but it has been conducted by Methodists. The Rev. John Wesley Hill is pastor, and it was said last Spring that Mr. Sloan had been brought to the church in New York from his pastorate at South River, N. J., at Mr. Hill's instance. Mr. Hill has been active in an anti-Socialist campaign to which he has devoted much time. This gave rise to the report that Mr. Sloan was to take the greater part of the responsibilities of the Metropolitan Temple, leaving Mr. Hill more time for the Individual and Social Justice League, the Peace Forum and other civic organizations in which he is interested.

In some quarters it was thought that there had been a disagreement between Mr. Sloan and Mr. Hill over the question of Socialism. This was suggested to Mr. Sloan last night. He replied that he had had no disagreement with Mr. Hill of any kind, but he gave his views on Socialism in a way that might not find favor with an ardent anti-Socialist.

"The position of the church on Socialism," he said, "should be a denial of the theories of the economic Socialists because they are not practical. I do not believe in the ordinary socialism because there is too much sin in the world. We cannot conduct a clean election or even the affairs of a city without corruption. How then could we expect to conduct a great public commonwealth under socialistic rules?

"However, the church must admit that the individual exists for the sake of society. We must grant that much of the theory of Socialism. I do not believe that one man has a right to more than another man because he is able to get more or has more ability. I accept the Christian socialism of the New Testament."

Mr. Hill could not be found yesterday at the Metropolitan Temple or at his home. Mr. Cornell, for forty years the chief layman of the church, has been on a vacation in the White Mountains, and is expected back in New York to-day. Mr. Loux preached last night at the Metropolitan Temple. Mr. Sloan preached at Calvery Methodist Episcopal Church, Seventh Avenue and West 129th Street.

Mr. Sloan would not say that he did not expect to go to the Metropolitan Temple. For several weeks past he has been filling pulpits in various Methodist churches in New York. With the return of Mr. Cornell he thought complications would be cleared up, and his own position explained.

PREACHES AND SKETCHES TOO

3,000 Instructed and Entertained at Dr. Pierce's Outside Service.

More than 3,000 men, women, and children attended the midsummer open-air evangelistic meeting of the Second Avenue Baptist Church in Second Avenue, near Tenth Street, last night. The throng extended along the east side of the avenue from Tenth to Eleventh Street and filled the west side of the street opposite the church. There was only one policeman present, and he had his hands full in keeping the trolley tracks clear. In front of the speakers' stand pressed a small regiment of east side lads. They were unruly and noisy, and the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Y. Pierce, the pastor of the church, who conducted the meeting, said it was the first time that they had behaved badly on such an occasion. A band of twenty colored boys from the Jenkins Negro Orphan Asylum of Charlestown, S. C.; twelve members of the Ninth Regiment Band, and a chorus of 100 voices from the various congregations which worship in the church played and sang gospel hymns.

Dr. Pierce stood on a platform at the entrance to the church. He illustrated his address with crayon sketches which he made while he talked. He said that so many mixed races attended his meetings that he found he could make them understand the scriptual lessons better by illustrating them. He urged his hearers to grasp the life line and get aboard the good ship of faith. He said a man being "down on his luck" did not mean he was down and out. He told of a man who had written to him, saying that he had grown sick of the pleasures of life and wanted the old religion back, and of a young Hebrew bent on suicide who had changed his mind when in passing the church he heard the evangelistic chorus singing the hymn, "Thow Out the Life Line."

Dr. Pierce was followed by the Rev. Stephen Gazsi, a Hungarian; the Rev. Leroy Zaraphonithes, a Greek; the Rev. Giovanni Allegri, an Italian, and the Rev. Michael Jaeger, a Pole. They made addresses in their native tongues.

There were seventeen services held in the church yesterday at different hours. Six of these were conducted in the Italian, Slovak, Polish, Hungarian, Greek, and Chinese languages for the benefit of the foreign congregations which worship there.

DR. SHAW STIRRED NORWAY.

Refusal to Let Her Preach from Pulpit to be Made Political Issue.

The visit to Norway of the Rev. Anna H. Shaw, President of the Women's Suffrage League in America, has made another party issue which promises to figure at the next election in that country. Mrs. Shaw, who returned home yesterday on the American liner New York, has been occupying much space in the newspapers on the other side of the Atlantic. She has been attending the international meeting of the Women's Suffrage League, which took place at Stockholm, Sweden, from June 11 to 20.

The international meeting was opened with a ceremony at the Gustaf Vasa Church, Stockholm, which is the State Church. The pastor gave permission for Dr. Shaw to preach from his pulpit. She is said to have been the first woman to occupy a pulpit in that country.

The suffragettes, encouraged by this, asked permission for Dr. Shaw to preach in the State Church of Norway. The matter was referred to the Minister of Church Affairs. Permission was refused. The stand was taken that while women have the vote in Norway, they may not hold office in the army, navy, or the church. St. Paul was quoted to show an authority for not allowing women to speak in church. The suffragettes took the matter up, asserting that the affair was out of the jurisdiction of the Minister of Church Affairs.

"St. Paul and myself were the most written about persons in Norway, so my Norwegian reading friends told me," said Dr. Shaw. "When I left the fight was still being waged, and I was told the affair will be made a party issue at the next election."

LORIMER WITNESS DIES.

J. S. Clark Voted for Senator and Was to Testify in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Joseph S. Clark, one of the Democratic members of the Illinois Legislature who voted for Senator Lorimer, died to-day in a St. Louis hospital following an operation for cancer of the liver. Mr. Clark's home was at Vandalia, where he was a dealer in lumber. He was elected to the General Assembly in 1906. He was re-elected in 1908 and tried in vain for the office in 1910. His defeat was credited to his support of Senator Lorimer and his connection with the purchase of desks and chairs for the Senate and House.

Former Representative Charles A. White charged that Clark was present at the Southern Hotel in St. Louis when "Bob" Wilson of Chicago distributed the cash to the Southern Illinois Democrats who had voted for Lorimer.

Assemblyman Clark was summoned before the Cook County Grand Jury and denied he had received any tainted money. He also told the jury he had never spoken to any one relative to money in connection with the furniture deal. He appeared before the investigating committee of the United States Senate in 1910 and again denied that he received any money for his aid of Senator Lorimer.

Mr. Clark together with Senator S. C. Pemberton was indicted on the day Senator Lorimer made his Senate speech by a Sangamon Grand Jury for their alleged connection with the desk deal. The first trial resulted in a deadlock of the jury and the second one in acquittal.

During the second trial Mr. Clark admitted he had testified falsely to the Cook County Grand Jury in saying that no one had mentioned money to him in reference to the furniture contract, but he denied ever receiving a dollar.

Mr. Clark was born in New York on July 8, 1848. At his home in Vandalia he attended the Presbyterian Church.

The death of Clark makes the third death of men who voted for the election of Lorimer. The others were Michael S. Link, who confessed to receiving $1,000 for voting for Lorimer, and Charles S. Luke, who died a few weeks after casting his vote for Lorimer.

CAPT. BURGESS DEAD; 45 YEARS A SKIPPER

Never Lost a Ship in All That Time—Retired from the Sea at 75.

BRAVED SPANISH ANGER

Flew the Stars and Stripes at Seville in the Face of Angry Crowds Just Before War Was Declared.

Capt. Charles Burgess of Brooklyn, the oldest member of the Marine Society of New York and who commanded vessels from this port for forty-five years, died last night at the residence of his son, John T. Burgess, at Montclair, N. J.

Charles Burgess was born in Cuthenberg, Sweden, on Aug. 15, 1828, and followed the sea from the age of 13 years until he was 75. He was educated in the Swedish Navy. He took charge of his first vessel in 1865.

Capt. Burgess, through his patriotism, figured in an international event just prior to the Spanish-American war. His vessel, the Bonnie Doone, was moored at a pier in Seville, Spain. Hundreds of persons passed there every hour, and on Sundays the boulevard swarmed with thousands. Capt. Burgess reasoned that as his was the only American vessel then in port it was incumbent upon him to show the flag. He got out his ensign. It was a bit weather beaten, so he ordered a new one purchased. He was advised by our consular agent to be careful.

"Now, Captain," said the Consul, "it will only attract undue attention. You know there is feeling here against the United States; besides, this is such a public place, especially on Sundays."

"Enough said," said the skipper. "Just what I want, Sir. The people ought to see the flag."

"Don't be reckless," said the consular agent. "There is no occasion for it."

The flag went up in a rush and the consular agent shook his head sadly. It seemed as though everybody in Seville saw the flag at once. Crowds gathered along the docks, and students and workmen talked loudly in groups and pointed at it. The flag remained there for several days. No one tried to take down the colors, although the Spanish officials were apprehensive that some action would transpire to cause trouble.

"I am a peaceful man," declared Capt. Burgess, "but if any man tried to haul down that flag he would had have to fight all the way to the pole."

During the civil war Capt. Burgess was an officer on several transports which carried men and supplies to the Union armies. He was on board the Graham's Polly, which with 1,000 soldiers and tons of ammunition, started for Sabine Pass. The Confederates sank the two gunboats which convoyed the vessel and the Graham's Polly escaped.

Capt. Burgess was looked upon as being one of the most skillful commanders of the sea, for during his forty-five years of command he never lost a vessel.

Capt. Burgess is survived by a wife, two sons, John T., of Montclair, and G. William Burgess, of Bloomfield, N. J., and one daughter, Selma Burgess, of Brooklyn. The funeral will take place from the Eighteenth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, on Tuesday at 2:30 P. M.

MONMOUTH COUNTY'S ANNUAL HORSE SHOW

Valuable Prizes to be Awarded at Eighteenth Long Branch Exhibition.

With one of the most valuable prize lists in the history of the organization, the eighteenth annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Horse Show Association, to be held on the grounds of the association at Hollywood Park, Long Branch, promises to eclipse in competitive excellence any ever held by that body. The dates set for the show extend from July 26 to July 29 inclusive.

Fifty-five classes have been carded, with the addition of four running races, one each day, for money prizes, with polo ponies and galloways as the contenders, at distances from one-quarter to one-half mile.

Special prizes will be given by the following: Samuel M. Schafer, J. Jacquin Rothschild, M. L. Schwartz, Paul A. Sorg, Charles A. Baudouine, S. R. Guggenheim, A. C. Schwartz, Herman Erb, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Senator C. W. Watson, John J. O'Donohue, Jefferson Seligman, Harry Content, Fiss, Doerr & Carroll Horse Company, the West End Shore Club, West End Cottages, and Casino Company, and the Patten Line.

The following gentlemen have been invited to judge the several classes: Trotters and roadsters—Robert A. Fairbairn and De Witt C. Flanagan; heavy harness horses—Jay F. Carlisle, John R. Townsend, G. Howard Davison; Saddle horses and ponies under saddle—S. Taber Willets, Charles H. Hurkamp, Joseph Larocque, Jr.; running races—Frederick Lewisohn; starter of running races—T. Clarke.

One of the attractive classes promises to be the one for four-in-hands for the "Old Sport" Cup, offered by Paul A. Sorg, which must be won twice by the same exhibitor before becoming his property. It was won last year by Emil Selig's team, and the conditions are that it shall be for a road team, with wheelers not under 15.2 hands.

They must be driven at a trot to a coach carrying not less than seven people on the outside. One passenger on each coach is to be a representative of of the Horse Show Committee. The coaches will leave Pannaci's, at Seabright, not earlier than 4:30 P. M. on the day appointed for the judging, and arrive at the show ring not later than 5 P. M.

The teams will be judged on their road qualities and their condition on reaching the grounds.

The ponies in the harness class are not to exceed 13.2 hands and are to be driven by children under 14 years of age who are amateurs and shall have never ridden or driven for hire and who are not connected with those professionally interested in the purchase or sale of horses.

Ponies not to exceed 12.3 hands are to be driven by ladies, amateurs, who are Summer residents of Monmouth County.

Champion classes will be seen in the harness horse division for animals, both singles and pairs, which have taken first or second prizes in the years 1908, 1909, 1910, and 1911 at the National, Plainfield, Newport, or Long Branch Horse Shows.

Hunters and jumpers will be shown over the following fences. First, flat fence about four feet high; second, post and rails, about four feet six inches high; third, in and out, about four feet high; fourth, stone wall, about four feet high. Twice around the course, and to be ridden by both ladies and gentlemen.

On July 26 a one-quarter mile race for ponies 14.3 and under will be held. A minimum weight of 150 pounds, with overweight allowed if declared. The next day the distance will be three-eighths of a mile for ponies 14.3 hands, with similar weight conditions. For July 28 a one-half mile race for galloways has been carded at catch weights. On the concluding day a race at one-half mile for galloways.

In all the races with the exception of that of Friday the nominations will be ridden by getlemen riders holding licenses from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, or members of a recognized hunt club in colors. Frederick Lewisohn will present the prize for the race for galloways on the day preceding the close of the show.

A PARK THE CHILDREN LIKE.

They Find Fort Washington Point Alluring Because the City Lets It Alone.

When the city begins to improve Fort Washington Park by making lawns, laying out concrete walks, and generally rearranging nature to conform to official ideas of what a park should be, the children of the upper part of Washington Heights will be heart-broken. For Fort Washington Park, as it is to-day, is just the sort of a place they like. There is wildness in it, and mystery, and no "Keep off the Grass" sign rears its unfriendly head.

Since the city bought these half hundred acres between Riverside and the Hudson, comprising for the most part the peninsula known as Fort Washington Point, it has had neither the time nor the money to make any changes. Old houses still stand, the old roads are unchanged. One may walk down Depot Lane to the New York Central tracks and the station, where a passenger train stops infrequently, as if it did not know that the Subway had taken all its trade. The ancient West End Hotel rears its unsightly bulk by the water's edge, and altogether there are none of the earmarks by which we have come to know a city park.

But the little ones find here freedom they do not know in most of the other open, public places. There are hillsides overgrown with shrubs and tall grass, down which they may roll unmolested; there are rocks the scaling of which is a daring feat; there are paths that lead alluringly into woodland tangles, and then lose themselves altogether; and, best of all, perhaps, there is the very point itself, jutting raggedly far out into the Hudson, on which stands a real lighthouse, and where, for all one knows, some ship may be cast ashore.

If one is persevering he may climb to secluded spots, where he can forget that he is in a city, and imagine he is in a wilderness with just a peep at civilization toward the busy river. Or he may stand on a bridge spanning the railroad tracks above a deep cut, and be very certain that this is a gorge through some mountain fastness. There are fences to be scaled and trees to be climbed, with no blue-coated minion of authority to stay the adventurer. It is a child's paradise.

The grown-ups, too, will regret when the city begins to make a real park out of this rugged tract. For lovers may find secluded nooks, or stroll through shady lanes far from prying eyes, and others, who have passed the time of romance or have not yet reached it, may find ample opportunity for reading or meditation.

ACCIDENTS DUE TO INEXPERIENCE

Ralph De Palma Offers Timely Suggestions to Eliminate Dangers of Dirt Track Racing.

In discussing the unfortunate accidents which occurred at Brighton Beach recently, Ralph De Palma, the famous driver and one of the greatest exponents of mile-track driving, made some interesting remarks and offered a suggestion or two to eliminate the danger connected with dirt saucer racing in the future.

"It is unfortunate that several drivers have lost their lives on tracks recently," he said, "but in about every case the trouble was traceable chiefly to one thing—inexperience. I do not wish to appear unkind in criticising the boys who are no longer with us, but merely mention it to suggest a cure for the fault in the future.

"Strange to say, nearly all of the bad accidents lately have occurred in practice trials, not in the race itself, and these accidents would not have happened had the men involved obeyed instructions and the A. A. A. rules. At Brighton one of the victims in practice did what no experienced race driver would attempt. He drove on the course while the oil was being laid, and against the track Superintendent's orders at that. At the wrong instant he encountered the oil wagon, and, turning too sharply, skidded on the freshly oiled surface and upset. The next day in practice poor Frey lost his life when another driver cut him off without giving sufficient warning.

"When the smash-up occurred in the ten-mile handicap on July 3 it was through inexperienced pilots not obeying orders. The race received a false start—some of the drivers who pulled away first failing to await the signal. They were novices and not only did they make this blunder, but also failed to pay attention to signals to halt. Inasmuch as this race was a handicap, and the long markers at the finish of their first lap might expect to see the scratch men at the wire on the 'pole' side awaiting the signal to 'go,' none of the small car drivers should have tried to pass over the wire on the 'pole,' but should have come down the stretch nearer the outside, in which case the smash-up would have been avoided.

"The remedy I would suggest would be for the A. A. A. Contest Board to have a representative officially appointed to supervise practice at each meet. This would not be difficult or expensive. The drivers who have been through the mill know how to take care of themselves. They always give each other a sufficiently wide berth, and you will usually notice that the veterans do not drive as fast in practice as in the competition itself.

"I would suggest that during practice on small courses the experienced men be allotted certain periods to try out their cars and novices different periods. In this way all would get the same fair chance, and if the supervisor saw to it that only a few novices were permitted on the course at one time, there would be less accidents. The practice supervisor could be any reliable team manager or even a driver. This is a point which the Motor Racing Drivers' Association, of which I am a Director, will probably take up with the A. A. A. Contest Board in the near future.

"It would displease me as well as numerous other drivers to see the A. A. A. abolish mile track racing. It is on the mile tracks that I made most of my world's records, and I hope to get more before I am through. If the A. A. A. decides to sanction no more dirt track events, we will have outlaw meets and hippodrome racing will crop up all over, which will be detrimental to the industry and give racing more black eyes."

ONE VIEW OF RIVERSIDE DRIVE

The Girl from the Country Can't See Herself Living There.

A house on Riverside Drive, or even an apartment, means luxury and possibly happiness to many New Yorkers. When their income reaches the height that a home on the Drive is not a staggering blow, urban success may be said to have been attained. But the girl on top of the motor 'bus had other ideas. The tan of her cheeks, the health that radiated from her, spelled life in the open spaces. And as the stage lumbered along past towering apartments and houses jammed in tight among the tall buildings she spoke her mind to her companions:

"Just imagine living cooped up like that! I suppose it's considered swell to live here, but how do the people breathe? The river? Why, you can't look at the river all the time, and the factories on the other side don't attract me particularly. I'm told it costs oons of money to have one of those dinky little houses, [she was looking at a row of five-story stone dwellings,] and yet there is only one front room on a floor, and it must be up stairs and down stairs all day long. They have elevators? Well, what of that? I'd want to see something besides a few trees and a dirty river, with a few boats passing now and then.

"And those apartments aren't any better. What sort of a home is it when you've got only one place to look and haven't room to turn around? I want space and air and freedom, and you can't get them here. No New York for mine, if this is the best they've got."

Which shows that life really depends upon the point of view.

Strong Combination

If you have surplus funds available for investment, the wise and conservative thing to do is to purchase sound investment bonds yielding a satisfactory rate of income and backed up by good security. Bonds represent simply a mortgage divided into several parts; the units being usually $1,000; sometimes $500; and, in a few cases, $100.

We shall be glad to recommend to you investment bonds, which, in our judgment, combine:

Safety as to principal
Reasonably broad market
A return approximating 5%

When you invest your money in a well diversified list of bonds combining these features, you may feel assured that you are adhering to the principles underlying judicious investment.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Unfavorable conditions in parts of the grain growing districts of the country have so far reduced the very bright crop prospects of the Spring that the present indications are for a total wheat crop, the fourth largest in the country's history, and for a corn crop which will fall short of the record yield of last year. At the outset of the farming season there were indications that with favorable weather the country would harvest this year not only the biggest cotton crop but also the biggest corn and wheat crops in its history. This hope has since been abandoned. for both May and June brought some declines in the exceptionally bright outlook at the beginning of the former month. This, naturally, affords ground for some disappointment, though the results still promised are far from giving any ground for uneasiness concerning the general result of this year's harvest. The Government's July crop report issued on Monday last showed a decrease in the condition of both Winter and Spring wheat, and reported the condition of corn a little below the trade expectations. On the other hand, the acreage planted to corn this year, as estimated by the Department of Agriculture, was found to be considerably in excess of private estimates. Placing the figures as it did at more than 115,900,000 acres, the Government estimated the corn area at very nearly 2,000,000 acres above the record planting of last year. On the basis of the department's acreage and condition figures the indicated yield of Winter wheat, as of July 1, was 457,900,000 bushels, of Spring wheat 244,900,000 bushels, and of corn 2,956,000,000. The total indicated wheat yield was 702,800,000 bushels, which was something more than 60,000,000 bushels under the June 1 indication. Private advices of conditions since the Government report was made up have been as conflicting as similar reports during the weeks preceding the publication of the July report, but if a balance were struck between the favorable and the unfavorable in these reports it would probably be found that the former predominated. This much, at least, is assured that the rains which have fallen in the grain growing States since July 1 have given relief to the crops, particularly to corn, and it is fair to assume, in the face of the conflicting private reports, that except in a few States the general condition of the corn fields has been maintained up to the condition figures estimated by the Government at the opening of this month. Improvement over the July indications would by no means be unprecedented, but it is well to take account of the general crop outlook without trusting to any such improvement.

If the July figures of the Government are realized, and it is important to bear in mind that the Government estimates now include allowance for average deterioration between the date of the monthly reports and the time of harvest, the wheat crop this year will be fourth in the list of the country's yields of this cereal. The indicated yield of 702,800,000 bushels is 7,400,000 bushels above the final figures of last year's total wheat production, and is above the average for the last five years. While the Winter wheat yield is below last year's production the total wheat crop, if July 1 indications are borne out, will be 1.4 per cent. larger than the five-year average. The corn crop indication is about 170,000,000 bushels under last year's record yield, but about 140,000,000 bushels above the average corn production of the preceding five-year period. These figures indicate very clearly that there is no basis at present for any concern over the yield of these two important cereals. Conditions have continued to favor the cotton crop, and there the indication is still for a record yield of that staple. Passing beyond cotton, wheat, and corn, the record presents a much less favorable showing, inasmuch as the oat and hay crops, as well as some minor grains, are considerably below the average. The Department of Agriculture estimated last week that the July 1 condition of all the crops upon which it reports, including many which never figure in the speculative markets, was about 10 per cent. under the average in recent years. This does not mean necessarily, of course, that the final result will be as much as this under the production of previous years, for between July 1 and the gathering in of all the crops there is much chance for improvement as well as for deterioration. It can best be said regarding the crop situation that the promise is for a generally fair return from the country's farms, the cotton crop, and other crops for which the outlook is bright affording an offset to the decline in condition in other farm products.

On the basis of this showing there may be lacking this Fall the exceptional stimulus of record breaking crops, but there is still no reason to give up hope of the normal expansion in business, which almost invariably accompanies the gathering in and marketing of the production of the farms. At the moment trade is showing the quiet which customarily prevails at this season, although the advance of the Summer has not prevented further improvement in some of the country's important industries. Last week supplied further evidence of betterment both in the steel and copper trades, which is all the more gratifying at a period when the general movement is toward quieter rather than toward more active business. In its monthly statement of unfilled orders the United States Steel Corporation reported an increase of 247,000 tons on July 1 compared with June 1, bringing its unfilled tonnage up to the highest figure in three months. This was a good deal more than some observers had expected, although as a matter of fact it did not come up to expectations, which had been held by independent steel manufacturers whose own business had been so largely increased since the revision in steel prices at the end of May that they had anticipated an even larger increase in the unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation. It must be borne in mind, however, that this increase of 247,000 tons occurred despite the fact that the plants of the Steel Corporation during June were running at a considerably higher percentage of their capacity than during the preceding month. The figures reported by the Iron Age last week were 67 per cent. of the Steel Corporation's capacity as compared with 63 per cent. in operation six weeks ago. The Copper Producers' report also reflected improvement. It showed a decrease of 8,5[illegible] pounds in the stocks of copper on hand at the end of June compared with the end of May. So far this month, according to some trade advices, production of copper has proceeded at about the rate which prevailed in June, while some hope is entertained that the domestic deliveries this month will show an increase.

The stock market last week drifted into extreme dullness and the backing and filling of prices resulted in but small net changes. Apart from the general factors bearing on the situation the most prominent of which, of course, was the outlook for the crops, there were influences of less general application which found reflection in movements in individual stocks some of which naturally showed variations much in excess of the average movement of the leading active issues. Among the incidents of the week were the reduction in the Virginia-Carolina Chemical common stock dividend from 5 per cent. to 3 per cent., and the declaration of the Baltimore & Ohio dividend at the regular 6 per cent. rate. The latter road in addition to providing for increased fixed charges and for the usual dividend was able to show a surplus for the year of about $1,126,000, despite a wage increase of $2,300,000. The reduction in operating expenses which the Baltimore & Ohio management has been able to make in recent months contributed in an important degree to the relatively favorable showing which was made for the fiscal year just ended. In considering such decreases, including decreases in maintenance charges, the question naturally arises how long these can be continued without impairing the physical condition of the railroads, but it is to be remembered in this connection that last year many roads largely increased their maintenance charges and it is with these increased expenditures that present comparisons are being made.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE

REVIVAL TENDENCY ON BOERSE.

Steel and Iron Shares Predominant, with Interest in Canadian Pacific.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 16.—The pacific course of the Franco-German-Moroccan negotiations had a soothing effect on the Boerse last week. Prices rallied and operations showed a tendency toward distinct revival.

Steel and iron shares were notably predominant. Phoenix issues rose considerably.

Reports of good crops and a prospective 12 per cent. dividend created renewed interest in Canadian Pacifics, but the shares closed weak on realizing operations. Shipping issues were higher in consequence of news of the settlement of pool differences.

BOURSE AT A STANDSTILL.

Business Almost Nil Through National Holiday—Better Conditions Expected.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15.—Business on the Bourse this week, which was shortened by the national holiday is hardly worth mentioning, and was almost nil.

It is difficult to foresee what the Bourse will be after the holiday, but as the Moroccan incident seems to be in fair way to be settled through diplomatic channels, it seems reasonable to expct soon a return to better conditions.

CONSOLS DOWN IN LONDON.

Country Nevertheless Enjoying Trade Boom and Cheap Money.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 16.—In the course of the past week consols reached a new low record of eighty years, 78 3-16, but efforts to make political capital out of the circumstances failed utterly, in view of the fact that the country is enjoying the rare combination of a trade boom and cheap money.

The Bank of England increased the reserve upward of a million pounds. The renewal of activity in the rubber market has been a feature of the week. The American market was very quiet.

DEMAND FOR RAILS KEEPS MILLS BUSY

Improved Buying of Railroad Equipment, Structural Steel and Tin Plate.

OLD CARS TO SCRAP HEAP

Roads Find It Cheaper to Break Up Freight Carriers Than to Keep Them Supplied with Safety Equipment.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, July 16.—It is predicted in some quarters in Pittsburg that railroad buying in iron and steel will reach 40 per cent. of the total capacity of the industry before the close of the present quarter. The buying movement in railroad equipment and supplies is showing staying qualities. Railroads are at the end of their rope in the matter of low stocks of supplies and delayed maintenance of track and equipment. Rail production already is heavy compared with last Winter and Spring, there having been large specifications during the past few weks against contracts placed months ago, in addition to the new business booked, on much of which prompt deliveries are specially urged.

Railroad retrenchment evidently reached its limit in the last few weeks of the second quarter. Purchasing departments have been short on the ordinary calls for maintenance. The Eastern trunk lines have scrapped more old-style freight cars since the opening of this year than during any similar period since the record year of 1907. With the heavier loading of trains and the more stringent laws in many States as regards airbrakes, couplings, and other safety equipment, it is becoming increasingly difficult to keep ancient rolling stock in condition for service.

Fresh contracts for elevated, bridge, and dock work are being closed by the railroads at the rate of 25,000 tons a week. Two double-tracking projects have been authorized in Ohio and Kentucky, the material for which has yet to be purchased. Tentative inquiries for rails for domestic use, pending last week, were estimated at over 150,000 tons. The Carnegie rail mills at Braddock and Youngstown are shipping standard rails almost as fast as they are being turned out, and the Cambria, at Johnstown, and the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at Steelton, Penn., are running their rail departments practically full turn. The Gary plant of the Steel Corporation has put on additional rail capacity.

Lines That Are Improving.

Most of the calls for July deliveries from the steel mills has come thus far from large corporations requiring extensive financing. The general consumers have been closing contracts with the mills rather freely since the opening of July, covering requirements through August, but specifications against contracts for July deliveries are considerably lighter than in June. This is attributable to the season. Aside from the railroad equipment and structural and tin plate lines, mill operations will not increase materially before Aug. 1. Operations last week varied from day to day, running from 55 to 70 per cent. of maximum capacity, aside from the three lines mentioned.

Prices throughout the list of finished product lines are firmly upheld. Since the last series of reductions in finished steel prices, beginning in May, there has been less shading than at any time in twelve months. Prospects for the staple Fall lines, including merchant steel, bars, sheets, etc., are improving daily with the appearance of new contracts. Contracting in all lines of crude and finished steel for the third and fourth quarters is belated this year, consumers having feared to buy immediately after the May and June price cuts because of the opinion advanced in some quarters that steel would touch still lower price levels. That impression has been altogether abated by the developments since the middle of June.

Little Doing in Pig Iron.

There is much talk of new contracting in pig iron, but little in the way of real sales. The larger interests, many of whom had entered the third quarter without any provision for a full quarter's supply of iron, have put out inquiries, but in one or two cases these have been withdrawn, and in no instances do the consumers seem in any hurry to close for the large tonnages on which quotations were asked, notwithstanding the fact that a number of the bids on these inquiries carry expiration clauses. Though the make of pig iron in the Pittsburg and Eastern Ohio districts has been curtailed until there is little question stocks will be materially reduced within thirty days, consumers have concluded that conditions in other pig iron producing centres are sufficiently unfavorable to prevent any advancing of prices in the Pittsburg district, where larger adtions to available pig iron capacity have been compelted during the pacst year than anywhere else in ehe country. On a fortnight's notice, Pittsburg and Eastern Ohio territory, merchant and steel making furnaces combined, could practically double their present output of pig iron.

Makers of basic iron met in Pittsburg at the close of the week. There was a discusion on the complications in the market arising from exchange and conversion deals in pig iron, which have affected the market in basic unfavorably several times in the last three months, but no attempt was made by the leaders in this territory to dictate concerted action in the conference. The matter of prices of basic pig iron was not touched upon at all. Inquiries in the Pittsburg district at this time call for upward of 50,000 tons of basic iron, but all of this will not be closed for a week or two. Part of the inquiry is only tentative, and much depends on the price developed in the next two or three sales in this district.

Basic Iron Prices.

There is a wide range in open quotation on basic iron. Although the last large sale of this grade was at a price under $13 at furnace, ruling quotations in Pittsburg at the close of the week, by producers, showed a minimum of $13.25, Valleys, with some furnaces asking an even higher price for forward deliveries. The market has been unduly excited by the influx of inquiries since the opening of the month.

Some consumers of foundry iron, notably the Westinghouse interests, are endeavoring to get quotations on foundry grades for deliveries running into 1912. Thus far the furnaces have been unwilling to quote for deliveries further ahead than Jan. 1. Sales of foundry iron for prompt shipment were reported during the week at $13.50, Valley furnace, and furnace interests are endeavoring to ask a slight premium on that price for forward delivery. In some cases contracts have been closed for the remainder of the year at $13.75 at furnace.

The $15 price on Bessemer iron, advertised for so long as "nominal," still holds, sales of upward of 2,000 tons having been made within the past four days at that price. The position of the Bessemer interests is even firmer than during May and June. Inquiry for malleable and forge irons is slow.

IRRIGATION IN SPAIN.

Work Starting on a Project for Reclaiming Vast Area of Rich Land.

During the four months from June to September practically no rainfalls in the province of Andalusia, Spain. As a result a large area of fertile soil, which should be highly productive, is almost idle, the frequency of droughts and the small annual rainfall discouraging agriculture. To remedy this condition the Government has started work on irrigation plans calling for the expenditure of $8,156,000.

Work has already been begun on a long irrigation canal which will ultimately have ten branches, the aggregate length of the main artery and branches being 153 miles. The main canal will have a length of fifty-three miles and will be completed in six years.

This work is part of a plan calling for the irrigation of an area of about 300 square miles on the left bank of the Guadalquivir River, whose waters will be utilized. For an additional supply when the river fails six reservoirs with a total capacity of 68,684,000,000 gallons of water are planned for neighboring valleys. Only one of these reservoirs is being constructed now.

On the right side of the river it is planned to build five short canals, with a total length of fifty-eight miles, which will irrigate an area of forty square miles. The aggregate area of the watersheds from which the water for reservoir storage is to be gathered is about 6,718 square miles. The dams will be constructed of cement, but the canals will be six-foot trenches in the earth.

Owners of the lands to be benefited will pay half of the cost of this great work, while the Government will pay the balance. The property owners have arranged to pay 10 per cent. during construction and 2 per cent. annually thereafter for twenty years.

The irrigation project has been brought to the attention of American firms interested in this work, with the idea that they may profitably relieve the Spanish Government of a great outlay by securing concessions on conditions similar to those under which irrigation has been provided for arid sections in the United States.

It is suggested that a responsible syndicate could acquire rights for the installation of electric power plants for industrial plant purposes, to utilize the tremendous power of the water gates. It is believed that when this irrigation system is in operation with its electric power plants great factories will be built for working up raw material now exported or sent to other parts of Spain.

PLANS TO IMPROVE QUEENS RURAL ROADS

Gresser Wants the City to Take Over the Highways, Pave and Maintain Them.

BOROUGH HAS NO MONEY

About 97 Per Cent. of the Traffic Over Them Originates in Other Boroughs and Is No Use to Queens, He Says.

Now that a way has been found out of the legal difficulties which have prevented the repaving of streets leading from Long Island City to the rural districts of Queens and other parts of Long Island, President Gresser and his staff have devised a plan for improving the other roads of the borough, which are in wretched condition.

The plan is for the city to take over the principal highways in the borough, and pave and maintain them as a charge against the entire municipality. None of these roads is included in the city's street system. Under a recent ruling of the Board of Estimate money appropriated for repaving can be expended only on streets which were paved originally at the expense of abutting property owners, in other words, by assessment. This confines the expenditure to Long Island City, where the streets were paved by this means.

The roads elsewhere in the borough were formerly country roads. Since consolidation there has been no county machinery for taking care of them, and the burden has fallen on the borough administration. President Gresser argues that it is too heavy a task for the means and organization at his disposal. He says it is the automobile traffic, which has grown to such proportions in the last few years, that has worn out the macadam. As this traffic is estimated at about ninety-seven per cent. of the whole and little of it originates in the borough, he believes the city as a whole should put these roads in condition.

This would require a new ruling by the Board of Estimate, as they were not paved originally by special assessment, but by county bond issues, subsequently assumed by the city. President Gresser argues that the property owners should pay for the permanent paving of a street system when one is adopted by the city and these roads are included in it or abolished, but that in the mean time the roads should be rebuilt inexpensively to obviate the conditions that have caused such an uproar. He has written not only to the Mayor, but to all the other members of the Board of Estimate. His letter is based on a report made to him by John H. Weinberger, Engineer in Charge of the Bureau of Highways, who said:

July 10th, 1911.

Hon. Lawrence Gresser, President of the Borough of Queens.

Dear Sir:—I feel that the time is ripe for you to make a request on the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to temporarily assume the burden of the improvement of thoroughfares in Queens County, making the construction and maintenance of the borough highways a city matter.

Claim has been made that those highways should be kept up by the Maintenance Bureau of the Borough of Queens. Most or all of these highways have outlived the average life of the water bound macadam road and effective patching is out of the question in many cases. Furthermore, it is poor policy from an economical standpoint to further patch these worn out highways. What is needed is reconstruction along more modern lines, by methods and with material suitable to withstand the changed conditions. On account of the worn out condition of these highways, the patching of them so as to keep them in a travelable condition is beyond the capacity of the maintenance force as provided for in the budget.

Again, claim has been made by others that these thoroughfares should be rebuilt by assessing the cost on the adjoining property. The highways which I now have in mind and which are included in the accompanying list are mostly unmapped, crooked, narrow county roads, not having any fixed width or established grades other than those established by use. They are yet to be mapped in all but a few cases, and when mapped they are, or will be shown as widened streets, or as abandoned streets, because of the fact that in many cases they are not adapted to a possible street system and are entirely out of harmony with the same.

These highways, however, cannot be abandoned at once, but must be kept up to afford means of communication through the county and between sections of the county until such time as a city street system is not only adopted, but is physically opened and improved on the ground; then and then only can these streets be closed to traffic.

The property facing upon these streets should not be relieved from assessment for paving, but the pavement which they should be assessed for is the final pavement placed for the full width of the street from curb to curb, with all subsurface improvements in place. In the mean time the city at large should provide the pavement of sufficient width to properly accommodate the travel.

Again, claim has been made by others that the cost of the present macadam pavements was raised by the issue of bonds which were assumed in whole or in part by the city at large at the time of consolidation, and that therefore they should not be repaved out of the repaving fund. It seems entirely proper that the city at large should have paid for these improvements, for they bear the same relation to the city as do the State Roads of Nassau County to the State, and it would be fair to assume that the State would have paid and maintained that greater portion or all of the highways were they not within the limits of the Greater City.

The travel upon these highways is mostly through travel from Manhattan and Brooklyn into Nassau County, the local traffic being a very, very small percentage of the entire travel upon them, and for this reason the city at large should maintain these highways until these streets are either abandoned or until they become a part of the regular street system of the city.

In the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, submitted to you, relative to the repaving of Jackson Avenue, we have been advised that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has authority to authorize the paving or repaving of any streets. It therefore appears to me that this is the key to the situation, and I would suggest that an endeavor be made to have the Board of Estimate and Apportionment pass resolutions adopting the streets as city highways, to be paved and maintained as a city charge, the pavement to be laid to such width as travel may demand, ranging from 18 to 25 feet, the expense thereof to be charged against the repaving fund or any other fund that may be appropriated for the purpose.

On the main through highways a first-class pavement should be laid on a concrete foundation, while on some of the minor highways a bitulithic macadam should be used. Let it be understood and be made a part of the preamble to the resolution, if you like, that the property owners are not to be relieved from bearing one full assessment when the street is in condition to receive its permanent pavement for the full width of the street.

Respectfully,
JOHN H. WEINBERGER,
Engineer-in-Charge.

In his letter to the members of the Board, President Gresser says:

"I particularly wish to call to your attention the following facts, that, owing to the undeveloped condition of almost the entire Borough of Queens, this borough gains no advantage from the tax which the city pays to the State for the improvement of State highways, for which she gets no return; that under present conditions and decisions this borough can gain little or no advantage from the repaving fund, toward which she also pays her pro rata share, and I am desirous that these highways, or as many of them as the board sees fit, shall be adopted as city highways, to be rebuilt and maintained out of the moneys appropriated for repaving this year and if the board sees fit in the following years to be provided for in the budget.

"I deem this but a fair, just, and equitable consideration of the road conditions in my borough, inasmuch as it is a well recognized fact that fully 97 per cent. of the automobile traffic on these highways is foreign and of no benefit, either directly or indirectly, to my borough."

Unfilled Steel Orders.

The unfilled orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation on June 30 totaled 3,361,058 tons, compared with 3,113,187 tons at the end of May, an increase of 247,871 tons, which was considerably more than had generally been expected. Trade observers figured from the showing of business still on the books at the end of the month that new orders had come in at the rate of something more than 30,000 tons a day. Judge Gary, on the eve of his departure for Europe toward the close of the month, had estimated orders in June at the rate of from 28,000 to 30,000 tons a day. The unfilled orders at the end of June were larger than at any time since March 31, when they were 3,447,301 tons. March marked the height of the short-lived upturn in the steel business, which started in at the first of the year.

WHEAT STOCKS GROW AS TRADE STAGNATES

HOG RAISING MORE COSTLY

Feeding Grains Mount as Hay Crop Dwindles—Prospects for a Record Cotton Crop Steadily Improve.

The wheat market this week was under the influence of the Government Crop Report, issued at the close on Monday, and under the influence of favorable weather conditions for the Spring wheat crop, and a very heavy movement of new Winter wheat, with a very limited demand. The Government Report, which was issued Monday, showed somewhat greater loss in both Spring and Winter wheat than generally looked for, with the indications for a total outturn of 702,000,000 bushels, compared with 764,000,000 bushels indicated June 1. The indications for spring wheat were for an outturn of 245,000,000 bushels, with an allowance of 1.34 bushels per acre further deterioration to harvest. If this deterioration should not take place it would mean that the yield per acre would be that much larger. On Saturday, however, one of the crop experts traveling for a Chicago house sent in an estimate of only 140,000,000 bushels for the three big States, made up of 10,000,000 bushels for South Dakota, 70,000,000 bushels for North Dakota, and 60,000,000 bushels for Minnesota. The crop last year in these three States amounted to 176,000,000 bushels This estimate was not considered seriously, although it served to run in the shorts. Generally conservative estimates from the Northwest indicate a crop in excess of last year.

The weather conditions have been most favorable during the week for the maturing and filling of the crop. The reports from the Canadian northwest indicated a condition of 95 against 82 last year, on an area fully a million acres larger than last year. The estimates of the crop in the Canadian northwest are very large, with probabilities of 175,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels for all Canada.

The movement of new wheat has been very heavy the past week, with a grand aggregate of 8,100,000 bushels at interior points against 4,300,000 bushels the previous week and 3,000,000 bushels last year, with an increase in receipts at the interior of 5,000,000 bushels compared with last year; there was an increase in shipments from the interior of less than 300,000 bushels. Stocks are accumulating steadily, and the market is feeling the influence of such accumulation. There has been decided pressure in the near deliveries in all markets, and a decided break in values, the result of the increased presure of the new cash wheat on the market.

A considerable amount of wheat has been sold to the mils, and there has been some export business, both in new and in old wheat, but a large amount of wheat sold c. i. f. the seaboard on export rate, was on speculation and not for export. Europe has not shown any particular anxiety for wheat during the past year, and the demand so far this season is very limited. The exports of wheat from the United States during June were only 3,874,000 bushels, and for the year ending July 1 68,820,000 bushels against 84,810,000 last year.

With a wheat crop in this country, as indicated, of 702,000,000 bushels and a carry-over of 92,000,000 to 96,000,000 bushels of old wheat, according to the different estimates, there is a grand supply of 794,000,000 bushels, plus the Canadian crop and the Canadian carry-over. With a Canadian crop and carry-over of 200,000,000 bushels, it would give an aggregate supply in North America of 994,000,000 bushels. The Canadian exports the past year have been only 54,053,000 bushels, according to the preliminary reports, against 58,252,000 bushels last year. With prospects for a much larger crop in North America this year than last, the question naturally arises, What will the demand be? With the decline in prices in the American markets, and the probability of the passage of the reciprocity measure, there would seem to be probability of a large business, at a price. Already a large amount of business is being done, cost, insurance, and freight, the seaboard, and it is understood that exporters are making large speculative freight engagements in anticipation of the demand. It is believed that New York will come into a large amount of business, owing to the favorable competitive at and east of Buffalo rates.

CORN.

The corn market has been an enormous market the past week, with broad fluctuations and excited trading. The Government report and some rains reported caused a reaction in values, but sensational reports predominated, resulting in a very rapid advance in values later, the market making new high records for the movement toward the close of the week, showing a little reaction on Saturday. The Government report, with an allowance for average deterioration to harvest of 1.9 bushels per acre, showed a promise of 2,256,000,000-bushel crop. This compares with 3,126,000,000 bushels final last year. For the week ended July 10 there were rains, ranging from one-half up to over an inch in some localities, all over the entire corn country, North and South, East and West, excepting portions of Western Nebraska, Western Kansas, a greater portion of Missouri, Southern Iowa, Southern Illinois, and Northern Indiana and Ohio. Since then there have been rains over a considerable portion of the territory not then touched, and conservative crop reporters in the field have not reported serious damage since July 1. There was, however, toward the close of the week a sensational report claiming a loss of 250,000,000 bushels in the crop since the first of the month. The market advanced to new high records on the report, but there was an enormous amount of profit taking on the advance. It is a weather proposition, pure and simple, and without a general break in the drought sensational fluctuations are likely.

OATS.

The Government report on oats tended to confirm the lower crop estimates, although the figures were made with a 3.3 bushels per acre allowance for possible further deterioration to harvest. If such deterioration does not occur the Government indications of 818,000,000 bushels might be raised to 950,000,000 bushels. Last year the Government was 175,000,000 bushels under the final results, even without allowing any deterioration to harvest. Notwithstanding this condition a sensational report was put out by a Western crop expert, claiming only 700,000,000 to 750,000,000 bushels for the total crop, and prices were strong on this report, although it was noticeable on the advance that realizing continued heavy. A feature which complicates the markets materially is the damage to hay, estimated at about 20 per cent., with a crop approximately of 48,000,000 tons against 60,000,000 tons last year, 64,000,000 tons two years ago, and 70,000,000 tons three years ago. The barley crop is also short.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products has been one of limited fluctuations and little feature during the week. Prices have made slow improvement, partly due to moderate movement of hogs, a firm live-hog market, and the pronounced strength in feeding grain and feed stuffs. With the continued drought the green feed question is rather serious, while stock water is scarce, and the market is presented with a situation where the cost of producing the pork and lard is considerably more than last year. Corn prices are 6 to 7 cents a bushel under last year, and other feed stuffs in proportion, while live hogs are only about two-thirds of last year's price.

COTTON.

The realization of much needed moisture resulted in substantial declines during the past week. Liquidation was heavy, and it was apparent that the recessions would have been of greater importance were it not for the buying by trade interests on the scale down. Crop accounts, while still mixed, were decidedly more optimistic, and in many instances these reports were emphasized by Southern selling orders. Around the 12¾c. level, however, representing a break of approximately 1c. a pound for new crop positions, some resistance was displayed by the market toward developing additional weakness, and although the resiliency shown was feeble, there were not a few who expressed the opinion that the favorable prospects to date had been discounted. Nevertheless, sentiment did not change materially, and in absence of incentive the long side of the market was abhorred.

Practically every section in the cotton belt received more or less moisture, and in some localities the cry of a deficiency in rainfall was changed to complaints of excessive precipitation. This sort of advices emanated from the Central West in particular and brought forth numerous advices relative to the depredation of the boll weevil. Ravages by this pest, however, are not well defined at this early date and in some districts its appearance is far behind that of last year, while in others it is stated to be in greater numbers than last season. Conservative authorities believe that a period of clear weather with moderate temperatures is most desirable for many sections of Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, and while with the advent of clearing conditions in Texas and parts of the Carolinas reports of insufficient moisture are not to be unexpected, it is generally conceded that apprehension will not be great unless another protracted dry period is experienced.

In the meantime, while the crop outlook is one of encouragement, the trade situation is far from optimistic. Owing to this, assertions made by the bulls that a large crop this season is imperative are not convincing at the moment, although it cannot be denied that with each recession in prices the prospect for an improved business in cotton goods is brighter. There is a decided difference in spinners purchasing cotton on the basis of 12¾c. than at over 13½c., and while even at the minimum figures operations cannot be conducted with any appreciable profit, considerable of the loss in manufacturing goods would be eliminated.

The early movement of cotton is not expected to be particularly depressing, as it is thought that spinners have already made arrangements to absorb these shipments quite freely. It is not illogical to assume this in view of their admitted light stocks, and the small carry over this year. Moreover, farmers have been educated to expect high prices and have received them for two years, so that some hesitancy may be displayed in their parting with their production. The absorption of the Winter movement, however, is decidedly a matter of conjecture at present, and it is generally conceded that, unless cotton crop conditions are impaired materially or the trade situation develops a decidedly better undertone, the era of high cotton values may be temporarily at an end.

The foreign situation, however, is still healthy, and unless something unforeseen occurs a liberal trade is expected to transpire. Crop prospects abroad are generally good and fundamental conditions, as in this country, are quite favorable for a continuance of prosperity. Conceding a good foreign trade demand, however, it is still an open question as to the ability of prices to be held at around the 13c level if the present crop outlook continues, for in that event a big consumptive demand would not necessarily constitute a bull argument until the latter part of the season, when the effect of the demand would be more apparent. In other words, if a large crop will be gathered it would seem as though trade interests will be expected to buy in good volume, in order that the price level can be maintained.

The old crop positions in the future market have been equally as unsettled as other options. It is obvious that the good outlook for the cotton crop has interfered with inquiry from spinning sources, as the logic in purchasing other than immediate requirements is not feasible. Nevertheless, it is believed that these deliveries are well controlld, and, incidentally, predictions of higher prices, irrespective of crop prospects for the immediate future, are not extinct. It cannot be denied that local stocks are light, with values below a parity with Southern spots, but the outcome will depend almost entirely upon the extent of the outstanding short interest and the urgency as to the needs of the mills prior to the receipt of new cotton.

According to The Chronicle, the visible supply of American cotton at present amounts to 1,136,000 bales, against 1,134,000 last year. Exports for the season have been 7,397,000 bales to date, against 5,947,000 last year. The total on shipboard not cleared is 16,000 bales, against 30,000 bales in 1910. Into sight since Sept. 1 totals to 11,614,000 bales, against 10,226,000 last year. Great Britain stocks aggregate to 701,000 bales, against 544,000 last year, and Continental stocks 296,000, against 340,000 last year. Total stocks at the South amount to approximately 275,000 bales, against 295,000 last year.

COTTONSEED OIL.

In view of the decided improvement in cotton crop conditions recently, the declines in cottonseed oil values were inevitable. Furthermore, it was not unnatural for the near positions, particularly September, which month is sometimes an old crop month and sometimes new, to show the greatest weakness. It has been realized for several weeks that there was no scarcity of oil pending, and that unless consumptive demand for oil improves the incentive for carrying over oil into next season would be utterly lacking.

Liquidation was heavy during the entire week, with selling incessant, and, aside from short covering and a little buying from trade terests, support was entirely inadequate. Sentiment was vey bearish and obviously the trend of values was not stimulating to consumptive inquiry. The South, while not a heavy seller of new crop oil, was offering more freely, and predictions are as bearish now as they were bullish at this time a year ago.

It was obvious that, were it not for the extent of the decline, sentiment would be even more bearish, but the depression recently has brought levels down to a basis where some interests are inclined to be cautious. It was pointed out that while the cotton crop outlook is good, the boll weevil is now looming into prominence, with the frost period still to be evaded. Bulls, who are surely in the minority, further assert that demand will be heavy with the lower prices, but in the meantime it is argued that there is no indication of the production of oil being other than unprecedented. The statement by the Government showing 168,000,000 gallons crushed last season from a cotton crop of less than 12,000,000 bales was undoubtedly bearish and the result of higher prices. The previous high record of production of oil was 154,000,000 gallons in 1906, from the cotton crop of approximately 13½ million bales.

COPPER PRODUCTION.

Although copper production in this country is being maintained at close to record figures, the report of the Copper Producers' Association for June shows a decrease of 8,561,768 pounds in stocks. This is the first decrease in stocks since the December report, which put the stocks on Jan. 1 at 8,358,874 pounds less than on Dec. 1. During January stocks increased 20,409,295 pounds, and by June 1 the increase for the year had run up to 43,965,737 pounds.

Production in June was practically the same as that of May, when the fact that June had one day less is taken into account. The June production was 124,554,812 pounds, compared with 126,962,544 pounds in May. Domestic deliveries during the month were 61,655,561 pounds, compared with 64,543,963 in May. Export deliveries increased by 9,481,962 pounds, to 71,460,519, making the total deliveries for the month 133,116,080, the largest this year. Stocks at the close of June were 157,434,164 pounds.

The following table gives the stocks at the end of each month and the monthly production, with increases and decreases:

Leader in Display Advertising

In June The New York Times daily edition published 422,700 lines of all kinds of advertisements, exclusive of Wants, a greater volume than any other New York morning newspaper.

The New York Times is read by intelligent people who can afford to buy, and the patronage of Times readers is the most desirable custom that a store can possess. With the purchasing power of its circulation, exceeding 175,000 copies a day, it has a definite and positive advertising value that is not surpassed by any other New York newspaper.

($300,000 reserved to retire the Michigan Puget Sound Lumber Co. Bonds maturing 1911 to 1914.)
Totals,	$6,500,000	$6,500,000

From a letter of the President of the Company, copy of which may be seen at the offices of the undersigned, we summarize as follows:

(1) These bonds are secured by a First Mortgage on 31,604 acres of standing timber, together with logging equipment and railroad on said property, total valuation being $4,182,702.60. Also by a refunding mortgage on 22,294 acres of standing timber, together with logging equipment and railroad thereon, and mill property and real estate in the City of Victoria, the total valuation covered by refunding mortgage being $2,029,014.74. The total net valuation (which includes cash and current assets amounting to $814,331.41) aggregates, after deducting reserves for timber cut, $6,993,290.05, over 4½ times the total authorized bond issue.

(2) Net Earnings of the constituent companies for 1910 operating separately were $257,836.63, nearly three times the annual interest charges on total bonded indebtedness. Economies incident to consolidation without reference to new business will largely increase these earnings.

(3) Timber securing this issue is practically all located on tide-water and is, therefore, without dependence upon any railroad or other conditions controlled outside of the Company. Its geographical location is such that it would find a ready sale as standing timber at any time.

(4) The district in which the timber is located practically assures immunity from any serious damage by fire.

(5) The mortgage provides a Sinking Fund of 75 cents per thousand feet of timber cut and sold (sufficient to retire the bond issue almost twice over) and also provides for the maintenance of a quick asset fund of $300,000 for the further protection of bonds and continued operation of properties. Management is in the hands of experienced lumber and business men who have successfully conducted lumber operations in the past.

(6) Total bond issue represents an indebtedness of but 42 cents per thousand feet of timber owned.

Having sold a large portion of this issue, we offer the unsold balance at

A proposition that will bear every possible investigation is open to man with $5,000 to $50,000 in well established manufacturing company with nearly $1,000,000 assets; company now on VERY HIGH dividend paying basis, will pay large dividends annually besides increase in market value of stock; demand for product far exceeds capacity; entire output for 1911 sold in advance at prices almost double those received by us in last three years; high commercial and bank references; this is an unusual opportunity seldom reaching the private investor. MOTOR TOURISTS CROSS CONTINENT Remarkable Increase in Long-Distance Trips—Many Ride on Easy Set Schedule.

Transcontinental tourists are not a rarity these days, asserts Robert Bruce of the A. A. A. Touring Bureau, who states that 10 per cent. of the touring inquiries made either in person or by mail at the National organization headquarters, 437 Fifth Avenue, are for transcontinental routes and maps, which is a remarkable increase over last year. There is an average of not less than one or more parties a day starting across the continent, and thus far the bureau has yet to hear of a trip which has not gone through successfully.

Before starting on his cross-country trip from Los Angeles, Cal., to Moosehead Lake, Me., W. M. Garland, ex President of the Automobile Club of Southern California, secured the A. A. A. map of transcontinental routes, then set a schedule of thirty-three days, which included several resting intervals, and is expected in New York City within the coming week.

Manager Monahan of the premier transcontinental party consulted the A. A. A. bureau before starting westward and arranged to have the revised transcontinental map information forwarded to him at Omaha for reference from that point to the Pacific Coast.

Half a dozen Texans were among yesterday's callers at the A. A. A. headquarters, the party being headed by R. L. Slaughter of the Dallas Automobile Club, who drives a six-cylinder Pierce. The car was shipped from Galveston to New York by boat, and the tour home will follow a trip to Atlantic City, the route being by way of Buffalo to Chicago.

ODD QUEST DRIVES EX-SOLDIER TO JAIL

THUMB PRINTS BETRAY HIM

So Army Promptly Frees "Honest and Faithful" Private—Man He Sought Free After All.

"The strange case of Grover Cleveland Hungate" they call it in the War Department, the case being that of James N. Dowdell, former private in the Twenty-third United States Infantry, who palmed himself off as a deserter and was sentenced to serve three and one-half years at hard labor in the United States Military Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Only the unerring accuracy of the War Department finger-print records prevented Dowdell from serving his full term, and it was not until he was confronted with the finger impressions that he admitted that he had pretended to be Hungate in order to get into the prison. His purpose, he said, was to find out through another prisoner what had become of a girl relative of his. A few weeks ago the War Department ordered Dowdell liberated, and with the issuing of the liberation order the story came out.

Gen. Ainsworth, Adjutant General of the army, received on Aug. 11, 1910, a telegram from Col. Alfred C. Sharpe, then commanding the Twenty-third Infantry, at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas, saying that Private Grover Cleveland Hungate, Company E, Twenty-third Regiment, had deserted the previous day, and that in doing so he had permitted a military convict whom he was guarding to escape with him. The usual War Department descriptive circulars requesting the arrest of Hungate and the escaped prisoner were sent throughout the country.

On Jan. 23 this year Adjt. Gen. Ainsworth received from the commanding officer at Fort Leavenworth a telegram saying that Grover Cleveland Hungate had surrendered himself to a Kansas City policeman and had been delivered to the military authorities at Fort Leavenworth. The prisoner had declared positively that he was Hungate, the message said, and that he was ready to be tried and take any punishment meted out to him.

A general court-martial was called, and it met on the morning of Feb. 8. The prisoner was arraigned, and promptly pleaded guilty to several charges, any of which would send him to the penitentiary. He said he was guilty of desertion, quitting guard, and of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline in that he had aided a military prisoner to escape, and in doing so had cast away his rifle and ammunition belt.

The President of the court asked the prisoner if he realized that when he pleaded guilty the plea carried with it an admission that he had left his regiment without any intention of returning to it, and he answered that he did. Sentence was then pronounced, and a few days later the prisoner was delivered to the Warden of the Leavenworth Penitentiary.

The new convict's measurements were made and his finger-print impression taken. The record and the impression were sent to the War Department. The record was classified, in due time, and ordered filed with Hungate's original record as a soldier. In filing the prisoner's finger-print impression the index clerk noticed that the impression was different from the original impression filed when Hungate enlisted, in September, 1907. The facts were reported and an investigation ordered.

The finger-impression records were carefully gone over, and it was discovered that the new impression fitted that of ex-Private James N. Dowdell, who had been honorably discharged from the army on Nov. 30, 1910. Dowdell had been in the same company as Hungate, and his record gave his six years of service as "honest and faithful."

It was the first case in the records of the army of a soldier, whose service had been honorable, successfully impersonating a criminal, and then having his identity proved by the finger-print records. The officials of the department concluded that Dowdell must have been crazy, and ordered an investigation. The surgeons at the penitentiary reported back that the man was of sound mind and had undoubtedly understood what he had one.

Dowdell, after admitting that he had impersonated Hungate, said that he had met Hungate in Pueblo, Col., where the deserter was working for a contractor under the name of Mitchell. At the time Dowdell was anxious to get in communication with one Harry Temples, a military convict, whom he thought to be serving a four years' sentence in Fort Leavenworth. He said he believed that Temples would be able to tell him what had become of a girl cousin who had been missing from home for several years.

The War Department records showed that Harry Temples had been tried in January, 1904, and was convicted of throwing a live cat into a furnace and of an assault upon another soldier. His four years' sentence was commuted to two and a half years, and he had long since been released when Dowdell entered the prison in February last.

"My only object in going to prison," said Dowdel, "was to find this man Temples and try to find out what had become of my girl cousin. The girl and Temples had been friends, and I believed that he could tell me what had become of her."

There was nothing the War Department could do except order the release of Dowdell, since the prisoner had committed none of the offenses to which he had pleaded guilty.

In meantime Hungate, the deserter, is still at large, and no trace of him beyond the statement of Dowdell that he met him working in Colorado under the name of Mitchell, has been found since his desertion at El Paso last year. Every police station in the country has his picture and description, and the policeman or civilian who arrests him will get a reward of $50 from the Federal Government.

TRENTON.—Charles, the 13-year-old, son of William J. McClain, President of the Common Council, is in a critical condition as the result of stepping on a rusty nail a few days ago. Tetanus developed and physicians say the case seems almost hopeless.

POINT PLEASANT.—The wedding on Thursday night of Mrs. Anna Marie Keyser of New York and Dr. Charles H. Grube of 118 West Eighty-third Street, New York, in St. Mary's-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church here, became known yesterday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. P. Bogert, rector of the church. Dr. Grube and Mrs. Keyser became acquainted at Point Pleasant, where they have been Summer visitors for four years. Mrs. Keyser lost her first husband several years ago, and owing to the death of her daughter recently an effort was made to keep the marriage quiet.

Fire wrecked the row of five-story buildings in the rear of 49 to 61 Ann Street, early yesterday morning, causing $50,000 damage. The firemen had just returned to their quarters after an all-night fight with a fire at 146 and 148 William Street, just around the corner, and Acting Chief Kenlon, who responded at the first alarm, sent in a second.

The fire was discovered by a fireman left on duty at the William Street fire, and when the firemen arrived, the buildings were afire from top to bottom.

The buildings were occupied as workshops for many trades. The owner maintained a power plant in the cellar, and the fire is supposed to have started in this room.

Joseph Tyburezy of 148 North Fourth Street, Brooklyn, a watchman, was thought to have been lost in the fire, but he appeared on the scene while the firemen were looking for his body. He said he had made his last round of the building soon after 4 A. M., and there was no sign of fire. He said that he wanted to visit an old friend who was going away at noon, and he quit work early.

FIRE DAMAGES DUMPING PIER.

Street Cleaning Department's Barge Virginia Destroyed.

The pier of the Street Cleaning Department at the foot of West Thirtieth Street caught fire last evening about 6 o'clock. After two hours of hard fighting the firemen extinguished the flames after they had done about $2,500 damage to the pier and had destroyed the barge Virginia. The police believe that the fire was started by a crowd of small boys who were playing on the pier.

An engine company and the fireboats Thomas Willard and James Duane responded to an alarm. Their promptitude probably prevented the fire from spreading to the freight yards of the New York Central, the Erie Ferry, and the Bristol Line dock, all of which adjoin the street cleaning pier.

FIRE PANIC IN PARK RESORT.

Seven Buildings Burned and Many Persons Injured at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, July 16.—Seven buildings which house places of amusement were destroyed, and probably 1,000 persons were thrown into a panic to-night by a fire in Olentangy Park, a Summer resort. The fire swept over an area of about a city block. The park is at the extreme end of the city.

Several persons were injured in the panic, but it is not believed any fatalities resulted.

Defective wiring in one of the buildings is believed to have been the cause, the inflammable material feeding the flames and causing them to spread with great rapidity.

FIRE SPREAD IN HARRISBURG.

Bakery and Warehouse Destroyed—Other Property Burned.

HARRISBURG, Penn., July 16.—Fire destroyed the bakery and residence of Bernard Schmidt and the warehouse of Amos Enders, causing a loss of $80,000, yesterday. The fire started in the bakery, which is the largest in this part of the State, and spread to adjoining houses. Mr. Schmidt and his family escaped in their night clothes. Fifteen delivery wagons and an automobile were destroyed.

The police are working on a theory that the bakery was set on fire.

Slight Fire in Holland House.

A slight fire in the Holland House, at Thirtieth Street and Fifth Avenue, yesterday started from two crossed electric wires over the clerk's desk in the office. It was put out with a bucket of water before the arrival of the firemen. The guests on the upper floors did not know of the fire until it was over. The damage was about $100.

ACTOR'S DROWNING MADE FILM FEATURE

BODY SENT TO HIS MOTHER

Who Telegraphed Cost of Her Son's Burial from Minnesota—Picture Machine Kept Working to End.

The drowning of Albert Brighton in Brady's Pond, Grassmere, Staten Island, while he was playing his part in a moving picture drama last Tuesday is not to be unprofitable to the company which hired the actor for his last rôle and whose camera was on the shore, the crank busily turning, when Brighton went down. Out of the death of the player an honest penny is to be turned, according to display advertisements printed in yesterday's theatrical papers.

"Film actor's sensational fight for life," say the advertisements. "Hair-raising act shown in detail before and during fatal plunge, in which Al Brighton lost his life to make drowning scene realistic. A marvelous picture film, containing 41 scenes, 1,000 feet of film, and in which 100 actors are employed. The noted picture player plunges to his death while hundreds applaud his death struggles, appreciating, as they thought, his usual great efforts to make a scene real. Order now."

"My first thought," so Henry Belmar, proprietor of the moving picture company and manager of the exhibit in which Brighton lost his life, explained yesterday, "was to drop the whole thing. I told all my people that they needn't come back till Friday, when I would take up some other play, but afterward I decided to put another actor in Brighton's place and go on. I saw the newspapers taking it up, and I just thought I'd give the public a chance to see the thing as it happened, if they want to."

"I suppose you hesitated at first because it seemed a little cold-blooded," THE TIMES reporter suggested.

"Of course it did—of course," Mr. Belmar assented.

"And you understand," his wife chimed in, "that if Brighton had lost his life because Mr. Belmar had asked him to venture into something unusually risky, he'd never think of showing the film. But Al Brighton was a fine swimmer, and only that very day, in one scene, he had leaped into the water on horseback. He must have had a cramp."

Both Belmar and his wife, who was Brighton's wife in the play, said that if it had been realized soon enough that Brighton was not acting when he called for help he might have been saved. In the play the hero's wife and child were being borne away in a sailboat by the villain, the hero (Brighton) and a negro slave pursuing in a smaller craft. As the pursuing boat catches up the villain had to seize an oar and knock the hero into the water. The slave then dived to the rescue. The players had been instructed that at this point the films were to stop and be taken up later at another scene.

As the slave brought Brighton to the surface he asked:

Brighton said he was, and the slave, whose shirt had slipped down over his shoulders and so pinned his arms to his side that he was unable to swim, turned on his back and floated. Brighton turned to swim toward the camera on shore, seventy-five feet away. He had gone less than fifteen feet when Mrs. Belmar, in the boat, heard him call out for help and saw trouble in his face. She says that, despite the fact that she understood the picture taking was to stop at the point of Brighton's first rising to the surface with the slave's help, she thought she must be mistaken and that he was still playing a part. Then she saw that the trouble was real. If the realization had come to her soon enough, she said yesterday, she might have been able to get the boat around and row toward him, but she did not attempt it, and the picture taking on shore went steadily on.

There were swarms of people on shore, held behind the lines, but they, too, thought Brighton was acting. When the truth dawned upon them, Matty Middleton and another man darted into the water. A lot of negro employes vowed they couldn't swim when Belmar ordered them to the rescue, but Middleton was soon at the spot where Brighton went down. As the drowning player came to the surface, Middleton made a clutch at his hair. It was a player's toupee, and came off in his hands.

Brighton did not come up again. Mrs. Belmar, in her boat, picked up the slave of the play. Middleton himself was nearly exhausted when they got him ashore. But the crank at the camera had turned on and on, running a hundred feet after Al Brighton was drowned.

His body has been sent to his mother in Minnesota for burial, the mother herself telegraphing the money for this purpose to the undertaker and bearing the expense of the funeral.

"Bud" Mars Out of Danger.

ERIE, Penn., July 16.—J. C. (Bud) Mars, who was hurt when he fell with his aeroplane here last Friday, is rapidly recovering at the Hamot Hospital here. To-day he sat up for several hours, was able to eat well, and, as he is now out of danger, it is expected he will be able to leave the hospital in another week.

HEAT MELTED PAVEMENTS.

Wagons Left on Asphalt All Night Sank Deep—Had to be Pried Loose.

One feature of the recent hot weather was its effect on the asphalt pavements of the city. The asphalt absorbed heat until, in many instances, it was almost as soft as when it was laid. Where the asphalt lacked binder or was not thoroughly mixed it retained the footprints even if a boy walked across it.

The youngsters in some Brooklyn streets discovered this, and with sharp sticks used the pavement as a slate on which to draw pictures, or inscribe their names. This softness of the pavement made trucking more difficult and the pulling so much harder for horses that veterinarians say it was the indirect cause of many a horse's death.

In few streets was this condition worse than in West Street. The broad, unshaded asphalt plaza between the Belt Line tracks and the pier headline was like a seething sea of tar until long after the sun set. One truck owner, at Pier 18, thinking to save his horses, pulling the empty trucks to the stable uptown and back again in the morning, backed them up against the pier and loaded them at night that they might be ready for early delivery the next morning. When the drivers appeared with their horses the next day they were unable to start the trucks at all. The wheels of every truck had sunk deep into the asphalt, some being buried far above the felloe.

Four horses were attached to the trucks, but they did not budge. The drivers had to get powerful jacks to put under the hubs of the wheels, and to supplement these with four horses and their own efforts with crowbars before the vehicles were released.

SHE PAINTS THE BILLBOARDS.

Broadway Stops to Stare at a Woman Who Makes Advertising Pictures.

Broadway, between Seventy-second Street and Columbia University, has many vacant lots surrounded by the most alluring examples of the advertiser's art.

The hoardings are sometimes two or three stories high and efforts have been made to make them artistic, if that term may be applied to blatant trade. But Broadway shudders at these signs and wishes that the owners of the unimproved lots would either build or put the fences to better use.

Recently, however, Broadway has been inclined to forgive, in part at least, some of these transgressions. For Broadway has seen a woman painter at work on the hoardings and has found much pleasure in watching her. Standing high up on a scaffold, in a very workmanlike painter's blouse, she wields her brush dexterously. She always draws a crowd which watches silently as the chubby face of a baby that some one's food has saved and fattened, or a woman's form molded into the latest thing in corsets, grows under her deft fingers.

An assistant stands beside her, but his only duty seems to be to worship. For this sign painter in skirts is comely and her creations are not daubs, but worth looking at.

DUCK THIEF WAS A TURTLE.

Farmer Catches a Big Snapper Carrying Off Its Thirty-first Fowl.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., July 16.—In the last two months Harry Vincent, a farmer living on Pleasant Valley Way in Pleasantdale, between the first and second mountains, has missed thirty ducks and a dozen ducklings. He set traps for raccoons, foxes, and possum, believing that these animals were carrying them away, and remained up several nights with a shotgun, hoping to capture the thief, but his efforts were unsuccessful.

This morning while watching his ducks on a lake near his house he saw one struggle a moment and finally disappear under the water. The other ducks swam hastily to shore. Vincent rowed to the spot, but could not discover what had caused the duck to disappear. Rowing ashore he saw on a rocky ledge a huge turtle dragging the duck along by its leg. Vincent summoned several farm hands, and armed with clubs and a shotgun they set out to find the thief. They killed it and found it weighed forty-seven pounds. An investigation revealed its hiding place, in which were the feathers of the lost fowl.

COMMISSION PLAN LOSING IN JERSEY

Two Cities to Vote on the New Method This Week—Jersey City May Reject It.

PASSAIC SEEMS DOUBTFUL

Only Trenton, Usually Republican, Has Adopted the Plan, Democratic Cities Defeated It.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., July 16.—Trenton is the only New Jersey city thus far to adopt the commission form of government. There will be special elections in Jersey City and Passaic next Tuesday, and it is believed that Jersey City will vote against the plan. There is much doubt as to the result in Passaic. Passaic is a city normally Republican by a large majority. Indications are that the commission plan has more friends among the Republicans than it has among the Democrats.

Hoboken and New Brunswick, Democratic cities, rejected the plan, while Trenton, normally Republican, accepted it. Bayonne, where the two parties are pretty equally divided, with a slight advantage for the Democrats, rejected the plan by a very small vote.

The election in Jersey City will be of special political significance. Without Gov. Wilson's intervention, commission government, it is believed, would not have a chance in New Jersey. Those who are endeavoring to figure out matters in advance seem to be most concerned about the actual attitude of Mayor Wittpen and Judge Mark A. Sullivan of the Court of Errors and Appeals, who are both avowedly supporters of the commission idea, but also are candidates for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Jersey City should the commission plan be defeated next Tuesday. Neither, however, is willing to withdraw from the contest and hinge everything on the adoption of the commission plan, as it was reported, Gov. Wilson had suggested to them.

SPOT, POLICE DOG, IS DEAD.

Friend of Children, and Enemy of Evildoers, He Succumbed to the Heat.

NUTLEY, N. J., July 16.—Spot, the Nutley police dog, is dead and buried in Sergt. Jameson's backyard. The hot weather was too much for Spot. He became afflicted with convulsions and snapped at everything and everybody, until Sergt. Jameson was compelled to shoot him.

Spot took up his police duties in the Newark jail, but tiring of the monotony of jail life, started four years ago for the suburbs and decided to adopt the Nutley police force. He assisted in gathering in chicken thieves, burglars, and crap shooters. In one case, where a chicken coop had been cleaned out and human thieves were suspected, Spot led the way to a cavity under a barn, where the missing chickens were found, killed by rats.

The dog was a familiar figure in town, and was always on hand to escort school children acros the street, barking at any vehicle that might approach. Scores of children visited Spot's grave to-day and placed flowers on it as a tribute to the friend who was ever ready to protect them.

Mayflower Seaman Drowns.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Arthur Parks, 22 years old, a seaman on the Mayflower, President Taft's yacht, was drowned in the Potomac River to-day. Parks was out in the Mayflower's sail boat with two fellow-seamen, when the craft capsized. His companions were rescued. Parks' home was in Highbridge, N. J.

FIREMEN QUIT THE BLAZE.

For the Aldermen Had Deposed Their Chief—This Was in the Old Days.

Edward Jackman, who was born in the two-story and basement house at 310 East Third Street, will celebrate his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary there to-day. He has lived in the same old house, which his father built, all his life. Jackman says that in his childhood he recalls that his father's home was thought to be pretty far uptown, and there were farms and truck gardens close by. He regrets the changes that have come over the neighborhood, but he expects, nevertheless, to live in the old house until he dies.

Jackman's father was Andrew E. Jackman, once a Coroner and a member of the old Volunteer Engine Company 47, which had headquarters in East Fourth Street, near Avenue C. John Julick was Chief of Department at that time, and was present at a fire one day in Third Street, when word reached him that he had just been removed from office by the Board of Aldermen.

Jackman tells how his father used to recite with amusement how Julick instantly descended a ladder and on the sidewalk shouted to his men:

"Boys, I am no longer your Chief."

Thereupon the boys put their hats on backward and descended the ladders also, leaving the little grocery store where the fire had started to burn up. Citizens put the fire out.

SPOILS SPLIT SOCIALISTS.

City Government at Berkeley Almost Disrupted Over Patronage.

Special to The New York Times.

BERKELEY, Cal., July 16.—Socialists took possession of the city government here only a few weeks ago with predictions that they would show what wonders could be worked by the rule of brotherly love. Already they have fallen out so badly that disruption of their government has been narrowly averted and conditions are such that the party organization has demanded that the city officials shall meet with the chiefs of the party once a month and discuss their policies.

Curiously enough, the trouble started over the spoils of office, as trouble has started before for the same cause in the older parties. Mayor J. Stitt Wilson who won his office largely through the efforts of young Socialists who are students at the University of California, began soon after his election to do what Mayors of plutocratic persuasion generally do—distribute the plums. One of the best of these was the City Attorneyship, to which he appointed a good Socialist, Redmond C. Staats. There was agitation for the reappointment of C. D. M. Greene, and Councilman John A. Wilson, Socialist, championed his cause. The Council stood by the Mayor and Staats was put into office.

Immediately the supporters of Councilman Wilson began circulating a petition for the recall of the Mayor on the ground that he was misusing his office to favor friends. That was stopped when the Mayor pointed out that no recall could be filed until he had been in office three months. Then the Councilman put his resignation in the hands of the Socialist leaders and demanded that the Mayor should do the same and let a choice be made.

The Socialist leaders held a meeting and refused to act on the Councilman's resignation or to demand the Mayor's, but put forth the compromise plan for monthly conferences. It is significant that this meeting voted down a resolution that no Socialist should ask for a city office.
